Hitler Gives Hint of New Army Purge To Veterans

Says He'll Oust All Not '100% Soldiers;' Won't Be Encircled Again, He Declares

World Affairs

OFFICIALLY CONDENSED text of Hitler's address on page 4.

FRENCH PREMIER Daladier coupled his prediction that Britain and France would soon count Soviet Russia as a partner in their front against the Rome-Berlin axis with a reiteration of France's determination to resist "undertakings of domination" by any European power. Page 4.

Veterans Hear Leader

Kassel, Germany, June 4 (AP).—Reichsfuehrer Hitler today told a vast crowd of German war veterans that Britain and France were pursuing a policy of "encirclement," reviving international practices which he said led to the World War.

But, Hitler declared, there have been fundamental changes in Germany, the chief being a determination not to neglect armament and defense as, he said, they were neglected by the Kaiser's government before 1914.

Today, he said, Germany is "unimpressed by threats no matter from what quarter they come."

Must Be Soldierly

The former corporal told his World War comrades-at-arms that Germany's leaders must be soldierly.

"I have seen to it that anyone who has anything to do with the leadership of the state is a 100 per cent man and soldier," he said. "If ever I observe that any person cannot measure up to those responsibilities he will be dismissed from his post—no matter who he may be . . .

"It is my unalterable determination to see to it that the highest leadership of the state and army thinks with the courage of the simple musketeer who, without thought of self, gives up his life if orders require him to do so."

Removals Hinted

There was conjecture in Nazi Party headquarters whether the Fuehrer's remark might mean that some persons in high places were slated for removal.

[Last week a British newspaper reported that Hitler had secretly "purged" the German army command of some 30 officers who opposed his policy of pressure on Poland for the restoration of Danzig.—Editor's note.].

Hitler appeared happy in the company of the veterans and his brief address was largely reminiscent.

300,000 in Crowd

He flew from Berlin in a military plane and was greeted enthusiastically by throngs which accompanied him through beflagged streets to the Karlweise, a field on the edge of this Prussian city where a crowd estimated by Nazi authorities at 300,000 awaited him.

Hitler's condemnation of what he again called "encirclement" was applauded enthusiastically. It followed his rejection of the thesis of German "war guilt" and his charge that "the Treaty of Versailles demonstrated what were the real war aims of the French and British encirclement politicians of that time."

Those, he declared, "were the robbery of the German colonies, destruction of German commerce, and annihilation of the German merchant fleet and thereby of the fundamental basis of existence and frustration of German political aspirations—in other words the same

Building Strikers Prepare to Picket Major D. C. Jobs

Picket lines will be thrown today around virtually every major construction job in the District. Workers and contractors yesterday refused to budge in their wage dispute.

No contact was established yesterday between employers and the building workers union, which is demanding 80 cents an hour for unskilled labor and 95 for semiskilled labor. All classes of labor are now paid 70 cents an hour.

Howard T. Colvin, Labor Department conciliator, said last night he expects renewal of negotiations "early this week."

Coast Guard Trails Tragic Liner as It Wanders Aimlessly in Florida Waters; Reich Recalls Second Refugee Vessel

By the Associated Press.

Miami, Fla., June 4.—The German steamship St. Louis, bearing 907 Jewish refugees from Nazi Germany and apparently steaming in aimless circles as negotiators sought to gain them entry into Cuba, dropped anchor about 3 miles off Miami Beach today.

A Coast Guard patrol boat, sent out when immigration authorities made a routine inquiry as to the vessel's position, first sighted the craft moving extremely slowly past Fort Lauderdale, bound southward.

The patrol boat fell in behind the ocean liner and by radio reported its position to shore stations. When the big craft dropped anchor off the Miami light, two Coast Guard planes were dispatched from the Miami base to keep it under observation.

Roosevelt Urges Moral Rearmament

4,000 Hear Truman Deliver President's Message in Hall Here

Four thousand persons packed Constitution Hall last night and heard a message from President Roosevelt advocating moral rearmament as a means of maintaining world peace.

The message, broadcast over the world via short-wave radio, was read by Senator Truman (Democrat), of Missouri. It declared:

"The underlying strength of the world must consist in the moral fiber of her citizens.

"A program of moral rearmament for the world cannot fail therefore, to lessen the dangers of armed conflict. Such moral rearmament to be most highly effective, must receive support on a world-wide basis."

The meeting last night marked the first anniversary of MRA—

James Roosevelt Reported Lessee Of Darien Estate

Bridgeport, Conn., June 4 (AP).—The Bridgeport Post said today that James Roosevelt, the President's eldest son, had leased an estate for the summer at Collender's Point in Darien, a town on Long Island Sound between Norwalk and Stamford. His wife and father in law, Dr. Harvey Cushing will occupy it in ten days.

City's Greeters Rehearse Today For Royal Visit

Police, Army and Diplomats to Guard Against Any Slip-ups

Diplomats, police, Army officers and civilian authorities today will apply the final polish to preparations for 36 hours of the most elaborate pagentry ever seen in Washington—the reception for King George VI and Queen Elizabeth.

At the White House, State Department, District Building and British Embassy, dozens of key officials will gather today for last-minute review of plans drawn up since last November 9, when the King-Emperor announced to Parliament his pleasure in accepting "the gracious invitation" of President Roosevelt.

While men charged with the safety and pleasure of the British rulers during their two-day visit to the Capital check and double-check the royal schedule, down to the last minute and the last policeman, hundreds of thousands of humbler citizens find their plans for the week revolving around those of the King and Queen of England.

Slacker Bergdoll, From Prison, Offers to Help Make Jobs

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 4.—Grover Cleveland Bergdoll disclosed in a tearful reunion with his wife and three of their five children today in the Castle William Military Prison that he plans to utilize his wealth to relieve unemployment in the country for which he steadfastly refused to fight.

The notorious "slacker," under five-year military sentence on Governors Island as a World War draft dodger, hopes to reopen his Philadelphia brewery and other properties, his pretty German-born wife said in a formal statement.

She also told of a plan by Bergdoll to start a building project on the 24½-acre Philadelphia farm he used as a private flying field in his harum-scarum youth and of his efforts to recover more than $500,000 the Government seized when he fled the United States for a 10-year exile in Europe.

Of Bergdoll's plans for development of his Philadelphia properties, his wife said:

"Grover will proceed to arrange for the permanent employment of between 250 and 400 people all year round in his business activity."

She will be permitted to visit Bergdoll every two weeks. On June 18 she plans to bring the other two children and Bergdoll's aged mother, who defiantly sought to turn away draft board investigators when they traced him to her Philadelphia "castle" before his spectacular escape on the ruse of leading his captors to a pot of gold cached in Maryland.

Bergdoll returned to this country May 28.

75,000 Mob Train, Delay Royal Sleep

Towns for 200 Miles Deserted, Villagers at Railroad; King Goes To Dissenting Church

By Edward T. Folliard
A Staff Correspondent.

Aboard the Royal Pilot Train, Redditt, Ontario, June 4.—Started now toward Washington, the King and Queen of Great Britain paused long enough today to worship at the little town of Portage la Prairie.

There they mingled with and worshiped with the nonconformist Methodists, Presbyterians and Congregationalists who make up the United Church of Canada at that place. It was an extraordinary picture, a King who is head of the Church of England and his lovely Queen worshiping among the followers of Knox and Wesley, but this is an extraordinary tour, as was noted at the outset when the King broke bread with Cardinal Villeneuve.

Today begins the really momentous part of the royal tour. Their Majesties, from a country still much of England, will cross Wednesday night into that brash young Nation which thinks and does things on a scale never dreamed in the Old World.

75,000 Farmers Gather

When they reach the United States, and, most important of all, while they are in Washington, they will occupy a position never before filled by reigning British monarchs. Then will come the acid test of that graciousness which has been so much a part of their impression on Canada, and of America's ability to make royal friends of two royal strangers.

The royal historian—there is one aboard the train—does not use the American slang term of "tops," but if he did, he would have had to employ it again last night when the British sovereigns reached the village of Melville, gateway to the Qui 'Appelle Valley.

Naturally a crowd had been expected, but the whooping, singing, flag-waving multitude that turned out stunned everybody in the royal party. Melville has a population of 3,000. Last night the town bulged with 75,000 wheat farmers and their wives and children.

Scores of Towns Deserted

Picture what George Washington's home town of Alexandria, Va., would be like if 200,000 visitors tried to jam themselves around the railroad station there, and it may give some idea of what happened at the little whistle stop of Melville.

Canadian mounties, who patrol the region, said that there were "deserted villages" throughout a 200-mile radius, literally villages and towns from which every human being had disappeared, once the whistle of the gorgeous royal train sounded over the prairies.

It was nearly midnight when the British sovereigns arrived, expecting to sleep in their compartment while the train remained at Melville for the night.

2 Die in D. C. Area Week-End Traffic; 1 Hit-Run Victim

Two men were dead and another was in a hospital with critical injuries last night as the result of week-end traffic in the District. One of the dead men was the victim of a hit-and-run driver.

Harry Gould, 55, of Arlington, found unconscious beside the Lee highway at North Veitch street Saturday night, died at Emergency Hospital. He suffered a fractured skull and ribs.

John R. Sisson, 54, of 2110 Massachusetts avenue northwest, was at Casualty Hospital with head injuries after he was struck by a streetcar at Benning road and Twenty-eighth street northeast. Police said the car was operated by Cecil W. Arnold, 31.

Elwood M. Burch, 25, of Edmonston, Md., died in Casualty Hospital after a crash on Edmonston road near East Riverdale, Md.

Virginian Found Slain Near Road

Louisa, Va., June 4 (AP).—Lewis A. Burruss, 69, of Richmond, was found dead today beside Route 15, about 50 miles west of Richmond. His skull was crushed and there was a stab wound in his chest.

Shortly afterward Sheriff J. F. Bickers, of Louisa County, arrested the dead man's nephew, Earl E. Burruss, 20, of Richmond, on a homicide charge. The sheriff said he was holding the dead man's son, W. T. Burruss, also of Richmond, as a material witness.

Hull's Aides To Testify on Neutrality

Moore, Hackworth To Appear Today Before House Foreign Affairs Group

By International News Service.

Starting the Administration's proposed changes in the neutrality act along a tortuous road, the House Foreign Affairs committee today will hear top men in the State Department in secret session.

Scheduled to explain the Administration's reasons for suggesting that provisions in existing law barring shipment of munitions to warring nations be repealed were R. Walton Moore, State Department counselor, and Green H. Hackworth, a department legal adviser.

But as Acting Chairman Bloom (Democrat), of New York, was jubilantly forecasting his committee will report the bill this week, Representative Tinkham (Republican), of Massachusetts, a committee member, issued a blast against Hull's foreign policy generally.

And Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of New York, wrote a letter to Bloom urging his committee to report the Kennedy resolution "to inform the whole world that the United States would not declare war, unless our own borders were involved or the Monroe Doctrine were violated."

Would Force Vote

Kennedy said he was thinking of circulating a petition in the House to discharge the committee from further consideration of his resolution, thereby forcing a vote on it by the House.

"We may begin voting tomorrow on my neutrality bill," Bloom said. "However, it may be Tuesday or Wednesday before we reach a final vote. Some of the committee members, chiefly Republicans, want State Department officials to express themselves before votes are taken.

"It is quite plain that Representatives Fish (Republican), of New York, and Tinkham are trying to play politics with the neutrality issue."

Tinkham Assails Hull

In charging that Hull would sacrifice American interests to the interests of Great Britain, Tinkham said:

"Secretary of State Hull, in conformity with his six-year-old foreign policy, under the specious disguise of pretended neutrality, would again sacrifice American interests to the interests of Great Britain.

"He is now demanding the repeal of the wise and salutary provision of the neutrality act which places an embargo on the exportation of arms and ammunition to belligerents in time of war.

"Removal of this embargo in essence is unneutral. It is intended to and in fact would favor Great Britain, who controls the seas. It means that in the impending conflict in Europe, the United States would sell arms and ammunition to only one side.

"This action, the sale of arms and ammunition, was the first long step taken by the United States toward our involvement in the World War in 1917. If permitted again, it may well once more involve the United States in a European war."

Turtle Escapes, House Takes Fire —The Soup's Off

A wily turtle yesterday escaped conversion into soup when the kerosene water heater which was to have been his undoing exploded and burned down the house of Rhed Burgess, Lorton Reformatory guard, at Gunston Neck, Va.

Burgess had deposited the snapping turtle, given him by a friend, in a barrel outside his kitchen, as he turned up the boiler to make ready scalding water. When the amphibian hoisted himself out of the barrel, the Gunston Neck gourmet rushed from the kitchen to give chase.

His exit from the house was followed almost immediately by explosion of the boiler, spreading flame all through the modernized log building. The Occoquan Fire Department arrived on the scene in private cars, their engine having broken down half way to Gunston Neck. Outbuildings were saved, but damage to the house amounted to $2,500.

The turtle waddled away in the confusion.

You Can't Park Here

But 56,500 Try It— With 18,413 Places

Picture shows how traffic laws are violated on busy and crowded Washington streets

'Fringe' Space Only Suggestion So Far As Clamor and Congestion and Disdain For Restrictions Continue to Grow

This is the first of a series of articles on parking conditions in Washington. Further articles in the series will be published daily.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Fifty-six thousand five hundred automobiles in search of parking spaces are driven into Washington's downtown congested area every day by private business and Government workers.

There is room—on and off the streets—to park 18,413 cars.

It doesn't take much figuring to discover why the District has one of the worst parking problems in the country. But it does take considerable figuring to find a solution—and at this writing, city planners and traffic officials apparently haven't even started to sharpen their pencils.

A few measures have been adopted to correct evils causing immediate concern, but planning for the future—beyond a sprinkling of suggested remedies—has thus far gone by the boards. Day by day the problem increases. Day by day complaints grow louder.

The average motorist, probably more familiar with parking conditions than any other individual or group of individuals, clamors for action. He is literally "fed up" with things as they are and his blood-pressure won't stand much more.

A mounting disdain for all parking regulations is slowly but surely resulting from failure to provide adequate auto storage facilities downtown. This was plainly evidenced during a recent survey, when 25 parking infractions were observed in a small area of the business district. Motorists, ex-

Farm Lobby Fights Changes On Pay, Hours

House Revision Bill Held New Effort to Nullify Exemptions

Five powerful farm organizations launched last night a drive to repeat their recent victory which proved only temporary, over advocates of limited revision of the wage-hour act.

In telegrams accompanying statements sent to all members of the House of Representatives, they asserted the revision bill which the House will take up this afternoon "nullifies existing exemptions" of farm workers from provisions of the act and "should be defeated."

The move was an attempt to repeat successful tactics used recently in forcing the House Labor Committee to recall the revision bill after it already had been reported to the floor.

Vote Slated Today

The Norton revision bill is slated to be taken up by the House this afternoon under suspension of the rules, which requires a two-thirds vote for passage and prevents any amendments from being offered from the floor. The measure must be voted upon in its entirety.

Last night's telegram by the farm organizations said:

"Analysis of Norton bill, H. R. 5435, to amend wage-hour law, which comes up Monday under motion to suspend rules, convinces us bill is inimical to bulk of agriculture and nullifies existing exemptions. It should be defeated. We respectfully urge bill be referred to committee, open hearings held and bill brought out under rule per-

Navy Secretary Ill, Reports Point Out; Admiral's Age Is 64

By the United Press.

Admiral William D. Leahy, retiring chief of naval operations, may be the next Secretary of the Navy, succeeding the aged and ailing Claude A. Swanson, according to reports circulating in the Capital last night.

Leahy, 64, was to have been retired May 31 in compliance with the age retirement law. President Roosevelt counts him among his canniest advisers, however, and asked him to remain until Congress completed action on his multi-billion dollar defense program.

Reports that the sturdy, gray-eyed naval chief would be drafted into the Cabinet cropped up after Mr. Roosevelt announced he would appoint Leahy as Governor of Puerto Rico and then, for some un-

70 Die as Fire Traps Women, Children in Movie, Levels Town

By International News Service.

Mexico City, June 4.—More than 70 persons, including many women and children, were killed in a fire that destroyed a motion-picture theater during the night at Zacatepec, state of Morelos.

Scores were wounded in the worst holocaust of recent Mexican history.

The flames spread from the movie house, called the Cinema Obrero, to other parts of Zacatepec and virtually laid waste to the town, located about 60 miles south of Mexico City.

A $750,000 sugar refinery, considered the most modern in the world, built in Zacatepec recently by the government, was wiped out by the raging fire.

The blaze was still roaring tonight, some 20 hours after it began in the theater.

Fire battalions were rushed to the burning town from Mexico City and Cuernavaca. They were still battling the flames tonight, although the fire was under control.

The government and the Red Cross sent crews of doctors, nurses and relief workers to the scene. They toiled amid the smoking ruins. Many seriously burned and wounded persons were extricated from the black wreckage of the theater, a wooden frame building, and taken to hospitals in nearby towns.

Nearly all the surviving inhabitants of the town, which had a population of about 2,500, fled into the surrounding mountains to escape the sweeping flames. Their homes and shops were leveled or gutted.

A short circuit in the theater's electrical wiring started the fire.

Roosevelt Backers Map 'Stop-Garner' Campaign

Ickes' Friends Say He Will Open Drive On What They Call 'Back-Stabbing'

By International News Service.

New Deal political strategists yesterday mapped plans for a hard-hitting "stop Garner" campaign in order to save the place at the top of the 1940 Democratic ticket for President Roosevelt.

Associates of Secretary of Interior Ickes disclosed he will light the torch for a Roosevelt third term within a few days in a public statement branding other contenders for the nomination as "back-stabbers."

The Vice President, meantime, maintained silence on the disclosure by his friends that a Texas headquarters has been set up to offer his name to the convention next June, regardless of any "draft Roosevelt" movement generated in the interval.

There was neither affirmation nor denial from "Cactus Jack" of his followers' statement that he will accept the nomination if the national organization they are setting up secures it for him.

Strategy of Silence

From the New Deal camp came a prediction the President also will pursue a strategy of silence. His most recent comment on the third term issue came in response to a question put him by one of a group of business executives at a White House seminar.

Asked "what about 1940?", the President is said to have cut his interrogator short with the assertion: "This is 1939." One of his advisers predicted he will continue to resist what they regard as Garnerite efforts to "smoke him out."

This source said third term advocates already are busy on the President's behalf, combing state papers of George Washington and other founding fathers for statements discounting the antithird term precedent, which history credits Washington with establishing.

New Dealers indicated they count on the President's forthcoming Western tour to deflate the Garner groundswell reported by Gallup polls.

Hull Classed "Doubtful"

They expressed belief a recitation by the President of New Deal policies, past and future, would serve to show the country he still occupies "the driver's seat," which his son, Elliott, has credited Garner with holding.

Third-term advocates were represented as counting on at least seven of the ten Cabinet members to clamber aboard the "Draft Roosevelt" band wagon before the convention.

Their campaign charts reportedly listed Secretaries Ickes, Wallace, Hopkins, Woodring, Swanson, Perkins and Attorney General Murphy as "safe for Roosevelt," with Postmaster General Farley and Secretary of State Hull classified as "doubtful."

New Dealers described Hull as intending to stand aloof so as to be available as a compromise candidate in event of a Roosevelt-Garner deadlock at the convention. They said he had vetoed a "favorite son" movement in his native Tennessee.

Irked at Farley's assertion of the "futility" of talking of 1940 possibilities "until the President has declared himself," third termers have been talking of the prospects of displacing him as Democratic National Committee chairman, it was learned.

Instead of seeking to wangle from the President a declaration he is loath to make, one New Dealer said that Farley, as party boss, "should be in there calling for a draft of the only candidate who can carry us to victory."

Launching of the Garner boom clinched New Dealers' convictions the 69-year-old Vice President will

KEYS TO AMERICA'S HEART

Today I went even mention Their Royal you-know-who . . . But if some King and Queen who were friends of mine happened to be coming here for a visit I'd pass on to them some suggestions I've heard by the best minds of the Capital. They could take 'em or leave 'em. You know, there IS a rumor around the cocktail bars that a King and a Queen are visiting Washington this week.

Queen Mary . . . souvenir dish

Send home to Queen Mary a souvenir plate adorned with pictures of George and Martha Washington . . . Send the little princesses a postcard of the White House with an X marking Our Window. Play a set of tennis on the White House court and wave a racket at the tourists outside the fence.

• • • •

Make the President and First Lady pose for a snapshot in the back yard, or else take a candid shot when they aren't looking. Put the Queen up to having her place card autographed by all the guests at dinner, "nor the children." There's a soda fountain two minutes from the White House; sneak out before bedtime for a banana split.

". . . banana split before bedtime"

Give a pair of cuff links to every photographer . . . Stand up in the car during the parade and wave your hat to a pretty girl in an office window . . . Play a game of kitten-ball with the Secret Service men either here or on the lawn at Hyde Park.

Go to a big-league ball game even if you have to cut your visit to the World's Fair short . . . Ask Mrs. Roosevelt for a second helping of ice cream . . . Throw a kiss at the lady journalists.

• • • •

If you review any troops straighten out some buck private's necktie . . . Invite a couple of Iowa Congressmen over to show you how to pitch horseshoes . . . Let the Queen borrow a powder puff from Helen Woodring, Missy LeHand or one of the daughters-in-law.

". . . cool at the garden party"

Lay a wreath at the Lincoln Memorial, too . . . Let 'em take your picture with a couple of the Roosevelt grandchildren on your lap . . . Egg the Queen on to reveal her favorite recipes for scones and oatmeal cookies . . .

• • • •

Tell the press, if you have a chance, that you're a farmer, too, just like President Roosevelt . . . Ask the orchestra to play "Franklin D. Roosevelt Jones" . . . If you make a radio speech end up by saying "Hello" to the family back home . . . If you do half of these things your American visit will be an unforgettable success. We're so gol-darn human . . . Cheerio!

Ellender Predicts Labor Board Will Reform Itself

Senator Ellender (Democrat), Louisiana, predicted yesterday that the National Labor Relations Board would follow "a more humane and conciliatory policy" as a result of Congressional hearings on proposed amendments to the Wagner labor act.

Ellender, a member of the Senate Labor Committee, said Congress would not approve any major changes in the act at this session "because they won't be needed—the board itself can make changes under the present act."

The Louisiana Senator said hearings "have convinced me that nearly all of the complaints against the board resulted because the A. F. L. and C. I. O are at each other's throats."

2 Members Away, High Court Plans To Finish Term

The Supreme Court, with two members absent, will hold its final session today before summer adjournment.

Illness will prevent attendance of Chief Justice Hughes, suffering from duodenal ulcer. Associate Justice McReynolds has left the Capital to visit at Elkton, Ky.

Today's session will give opportunity for the court to deliver decisions and announce action on petitions for review of a number of cases. Still awaiting decision are several important cases including the question of whether a State, after once rejecting the pending Constitutional amendment to abolish child labor, may later ratify it.

Byrnes Would Key Pensions to State Wealth

Urges U. S. Increase Share for Aged In Poorer States

By the Associated Press.

Senator Byrnes (Democrat), South Carolina proposed yesterday that Federal contributions to the States for old-age assistance payments be made on a sliding scale based on a State's per capita income.

Asserting this would assure a minimum payment of at least $15 a month even in the poorer States, Byrnes said it would be of "a great deal more practical benefit" than increasing the present maximum $15 a month Federal contribution as recommended by the House Ways and Means Committee.

Under the present social security law, monthly old-age assistance payments are made by the States, but the Federal Government matches State funds dollar-for-dollar up to $15. Thus if the payment in a State is $30, $15 comes from the State and $15 from the Federal Government.

Would Match $20 Payments

In recommending amendments to the law, the House Committee proposed Saturday that the Federal Government match State payments up to $20 a month.

Byrnes' plan provides for the Federal Government to contribute one-half to two-thirds of the total payment, but in no case more than $15.

Whatever percentage a State would have to put up under his plan would be determined by the relation of the State's per capita income to the national average.

This would mean that in the State of lowest per capita income, if the old-age assistance payment was $15 a month, the Federal Government would contribute $10 of the total and the State $5. On the other hand, if the State of greatest per capita income wished to make payments of $15 a month it would have to put up $7.50 and the Government would contribute $7.50.

Byrnes said payments in some States now ran as low as $8 a month because the States could afford only $4 and the Federal Government could share only on a 50-50 basis.

He contended the proposal to increase the maximum Federal contribution to $20 would benefit only the wealthier States. Speaking of the States now contributing less than $15, he said:

"How can they contribute $20 a month to match the Federal contribution of $20 if they can only dig up $4 a month, as in some instances now? The answer is simple, they can't."

Byrnes said he also would propose a $5 minimum unemployment compensation payment.

He said he would advance his proposals formally when the Senate Finance Committee begins consideration of the social security amendments. The committee will take up the amendments after the House acts on recommendations of its Ways and Means Committee.

FCC Revises International Broadcast Rule

Future Programs To 'Reflect Culture Of This Country'

This country's international broadcast stations must "promote international goodwill, understanding and co-operation" with their programs beginning November 1.

A spokesman for the Federal Communications Commission announced yesterday the effective date of revised rules governing international broadcasters. These stations must obtain new one-year licenses by that date.

Annually thereafter they must go back to the FCC for renewal and if called upon to do so they must be in a position to show their programs have reflected the "culture of this country" and promoted "international goodwill, understanding and co-operation."

Unless a station's programs have been complained about, officials said, renewal of license will be only a routine matter.

Congress Reacts

Institution of the rule already has had some repercussions in Congress. Representative McLeod (Republican), of Michigan, told the House last week that President Roosevelt should ask resignations of the communication commissioners.

He asserted the rule "completely destroys" freedom of religion, speech and the press and was in effect a censorship.

Taking cognizance of this criticism, an FCC spokesman said the commission's policy was promulgated only after being carefully reviewed by the State Department.

"There is no intention whatsoever on the part of any commission official to even suggest the scrutiny of individual programs prior to their release by the broadcast stations," he said.

"The language used with respect to program service follows almost word for word the text of a resolution adopted at the seventh International Conference of American States held in Montevideo in 1933.

Quotes Resolution

"The resolution says 'These broadcasting channels are intended to be used in promoting better understanding among the republics of the American Continent, through the broadcasting of the music of the several countries and addresses on their cultural and intellectual life.'"

The rules apply only to international broadcast stations—stations which send out programs intended for the general public in other countries. They do not apply to telegraph or point-to-point stations such as are used for transmitting news matter or personal messages from one country to another.

Most of this country's 14 international stations direct their programs chiefly to Latin America.

Leaders Warn Of Filibuster On Neutrality

Senate Opposition To Change Formidable, President Is Told

By International News Service.

President Roosevelt will be told by the Democratic "Big Four" on Capitol Hill today that all of his major legislative proposals, save revision of the neutrality law, will be enacted into law by mid-July—that on neutrality a long, hard fight in the Senate is certain.

Results of a Congressional survey will be submitted by Vice President Garner, Speaker Bankhead, Senate Majority Leader Barkley and House Majority Leader Rayburn.

While Administration leaders were optimistic over outlook for passage of the neutrality act changes recommended by Secretary of State Hull in the House, they were of the opinion that the opposition in the Senate is so formidable that a filibuster is certain if attempts are made to force the issue in that body.

Opponents of the Administration proposal to repeal existing law forbidding exportation of munitions to warring nations are so numerous in the Senate that they could prevent a vote if they find themselves outnumbered, it was conceded.

Several Major Measures

After passing the five-month mark with no major legislation to its credit, save a series of bills to build up armaments, Congress this week will tackle several far-reaching measures. Indications were that this month will overshadow all others of the session for activity.

The House Foreign Affairs Committee this morning will hear State Department officials express their views of the Bloom neutrality bill, which is along lines proposed by Hull.

In the afternoon the House will resort to unusual procedure of trying to ram through amendments to the wage-hour law.

House Democratic leaders planned to call up the social security act amendments this week. Indications were recommendations of the House Ways and Means Committee will be reported.

The tax revision bill will follow and then the annual appropriation for the WPA. Measures already passed by the Senate to help rehabilitate railroads also were on the "must" list. Indications were the neutrality bill would be caled up in the House late this month.

To Act on Money Powers

In the Senate today a conference report on the so-called strategic war materials bill probably will be acted upon. This measure, already passed by the House in different form but allowing a maximum outlay of $100,000,000 for purchase of war materials not produced in the United States, was expected to become law before adjournment.

The House-passed bill to extend until June 30, 1941, the President's powers to alter gold content of the dollar and to issue up to $3,000,000,000 in greenbacks, will be acted upon by the Senate Banking and Currency Committee probably Tuesday. That measure, too, was expected to become law, despite opposition of Senator Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, and others.

This measure also would continue the $2,000,000,000 foreign exchange stabilization fund.

Administration forces were exerting pressure for passage of the Mead bill to provide RFC loans for small business firms before Congress calls it quits. The bill is before the Senate Banking Committee.

Barring a possible rebellion in both the Senate and House ranks, there will be no amendments to the Wagner labor relations act, leaders declared.

House Bill Would Vitally Change Relief Setup

By the Associated Press.

A House Appropriations subcommittee has virtually completed drafting a bill for fundamental changes in the relief setup.

Representative Woodrum (Democrat), Virginia, acting chairman, said he hoped to have the measure ready to report to the House not later than Tuesday.

Well-informed sources said the committee had agreed to recommend that $125,000,000 of the $1,447,000,000 requested by President Roosevelt for the WPA be earmarked for the Public Works Administration.

Hughes Is 'Unchanged;' Doctor Leaves City

Condition of Chief Justice Hughes, ill with a duodenal ulcer, was reported "unchanged" at his home yesterday. That his condition was not considered serious, however, was attested by the fact that his attending physician left the city for the week-end.

Confederate Memorial Services Held at Arlington

Tribute to Confederate dead was paid yesterday in memorial services in Arlington Cemetery amphitheater and the Confederate Monument by United Confederate Veterans, Sons and Daughters of the Confederacy and the Confederate Southern Memorial Association. New South Rising, Pepper Says At Confederate Day Services

Brilliant Sun Bathes Children Decorating Tombs After Prayers at Monument Near Arlington Amphitheater; Unknown Honored

Confederate flags waved side by side with the Stars and Stripes yesterday in Arlington Amphitheater as Senator Claude Pepper (Democrat), of Florida paid tribute to the fallen heroes of the Confederate Army and looked forward to a new South, built in "the architecture of the present day."

"The way of life the men of the South knew and loved was mellowed with age and refinement," he said, at Memorial Day exercises sponsored by Camp 171, United Confederate Veterans, and the Sons and Daughters of the Confederacy.

Confederate Graves Decorated

"It grew under the inspiration of beauty, of courage, of chivalry, of devotion to duty, of a code of life in which honor was the first principle," the Senator continued. And upon the "honorable ashes" into which it crumbled after the "inevitable conflict" with the "newer way of life of the North . . . is arising a new edifice."

Earlier the children of the Confederacy had strewn flowers on the graves of the Confederate soldiers, under the direction of Mrs. William F. Downing, after a prayer had been said by Dr. John E. Briggs, chaplain of Camp 305, Sons of Confederate Veterans, at the foot of the massive bronze Confederate monument opposite the amphitheater.

Wreath for Unknown Soldier

The sun shone brilliantly on the rich colors of flags and uniforms and the white marble of the theater as more than 300 people witnessed the ceremonies. A reading by Miss Ann Rives Evans followed the playing of "The Star-Spangled Banner" by the United States Marine Band; Mrs. R. Stevens Pendexter led the pledge to the Stars and Stripes and Mrs. Richard A. Allen the salute to the Confederate flag. The American's creed was read by Mrs. Livingston Vann, jr.

Mrs. Norman Hardy Britton, of Mary Taliaferro Thompson Chapter, Confederate Southern Memorial Association, laid a wreath on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier at the conclusion of the exercises.

Earle Held Slated For Envoy's Post

Pittsburgh, June 4 (AP).—The Sun-Telegraph said today it had learned from a reliable source that former Gov. George H. Earle soon will return to the United States diplomatic service.

The newspaper said Earle "will receive an important appointment from President Roosevelt." In 1933, Earle was appointed minister to Austria. He resigned the post in 1934 to run for Governor of Pennsylvania.

Filipinos Study Plan to Admit 30,000 Exiles

U. S. and Islands Would Like to Offset Japanese Colonies

By the Associated Press.

Settlement of tens of thousands of German Jewish refugees in the Philippines to offset the influence of Japanese there is a possibility being turned over in the minds of officials here and in the Islands.

A decision will await the report of a special survey committee recently sent to the islands.

This committee, appointed by the President's Advisory Committee on Refugees, New York City, is due back in the United States shortly.

The tentative plan, in which the Philippine Commonwealth is reliably reported to have joined, is to settle some 30,000 German political exiles in the Island of Mindanao, where the Japanese in the Philippines are principally concentrated.

Both the Philippine government and United States authorities are preoccupied with the growing Japanese colony at Davao, on Mindanao, second largest of the Philippine group.

There are now 20,000 Japanese there. Furthermore, their influence is out of all proportion to their numbers—and presumably it will multiply after the islands reach their independence. It can be summed up with a few figures.

At Davao the Japanese own more than 50 per cent of the arable land, 70 per cent of the abaca production. They control more than 50 per cent of the lumber, copra, hemp and fish exports, 95 per cent of Davao's exports to the United States.

Progress!!
A CLOSE-UP from day to day obscures the longer perspective.
So we pause to "take stock" of progress and direction.
Did you realize that Capital Transit has in the past 5½ years:—
For Passengers
1. Introduced the weekly car and bus pass. They've bought over 17 millions. Rides per pass average about 34. Right low priced riding that!
2. Bought 153 new streamlined cars and 475 new buses, costing altogether over $6,000,000; reconditioned 50 cars at a cost of $238,000. A fleet to be proud of.
3. Stepped up the number of cars and buses at your service in the peak period from about 740 to nearly 1100. That's an increase of more than 48%; right sizeable we think.
For Employment
1. Furnished steady work for 2,500 to 3,500 men and women.
2. Added nearly 1,000 people to its payroll since 1933.
3. Raised average pay per year—from $1,368 in 1934, to $1,672 in 1938, an increase of 22%.
4. Disbursed total payroll—$4,218,000 in 1934, $5,970,000 in 1938.
For Business
1. Paid out more than $30,000,000 in wages in the 5½ years. Most of that sum went to Washington business men.
2. Spent nearly $2,000,000 in track rerouting to make a better coordinated transportation system.
3. Transported 250,000 people daily to and from homes, stores, offices and theatres—roundly 500,000 rides daily.
For Government
1. Paid taxes to District of Columbia and Federal Government—in 1934, $576,874, in 1938, $974,255, in the 5 years, $3,592,194.
For Stockholders
1. Paid One dividend of One percent in One year, 1934 amounting to $240,000.

Martin U.A.W. Faction Votes To Rejoin AFL

Auto Union Leader To Confer Here With Green on Charter

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, June 4.—Headquarters of Homer Martin's Independent United Automobile Workers Union today announced its union membership had voted "overwhelmingly" to reaffiliate with the American Federation of Labor.

The office said tabulation of a recently completed membership poll showed 70,354 votes cast, 66,768 in favor of reaffiliation with the A. F. of L. and 3,370 opposed. Blank ballots totaled 178 and 38 were voided.

Martin, president of the Independent U. A. W., immediately wired William F. Green, head of the A. F. of L., requesting a conference in Washington Tuesday "for the purpose of confirming our reaffiliation and receiving our charter of affiliation."

The U. A. W. withdrew from the A. F. L. and joined the Congress of Industrial Organization following a U. A. W. convention in South Bend, Ind., in 1936. Last year Martin split with his executive board and set up his faction as an independent union at a convention here last March. His opponents remained with the C. I. O.

Both Martin's independent U. A. W. and the C. I. O.-U. A. W. are currently engaged in a court fight for designation as the "official" United Automobile Workers Union.

Martin's membership voted for reaffiliation with the understanding that their union would be given full autonomous authority in the administration of its own affairs.

Martin conferred with Green before the referendum was initiated and announced that Green had agreed to accept the union into the A. F. L. under terms laid down by Martin. The terms included the four provisions included on the ballot of reaffiliation, Martin said.

To Confer with Martin

President William Green of the American Federation of Labor tonight said he expected to confer with Homer Martin tomorrow or Tuesday about reaffiliation of Martin's independent United Automobile Workers Union with the A. F. L.

Green said he would make no formal statement about the independent U. A. W.'s action until after he had talked to Martin but observed that the vote "indicates a strong desire of a large part of the auto workers to come back to the A. F. L."

Insurance Heads To Testify Before Monopoly Inquiry

By the Associated Press.

Ranking officials and actuaries of major life insurance companies have been asked by the Monopoly Committee to testify tomorrow concerning competition among the companies they represent.

Disclosing this yesterday, representatives of the Securities and Exchange Commission, who will present to the committee the results of a study of insurance companies, said testimony would deal with "various inter-company agreements existing among the principal life insurance companies and the operation of certain insurance associations."

This testimony, they said, should show "the degree to which the life insurance business is openly competitive and the degree to which it is subject to anti-competitive understandings and agreements.

Coast Gasser Roars In Near Oil Well

Montebello, Calif., June 4 (INS).—A score of men wearing gas masks worked feverishly to bring under control a second wild well in Montebello which today roared skyward.

Traffic on Beverly boulevard, from which the gasser is but a short distance, was halted. The well is about 300 feet from an oil well which "erupted" Thursday night and which was 38 hours out of control.

12 PWA Projects End Every Day, Ickes Told

Reports to Public Works Administrator Ickes showed yesterday that non-Federal PWA projects are being completed at the rate of more than nine per calendar day, and that more than three Federal PWA projects are being completed daily.

More than 24 per cent of the non-Federal projects have been completed and 18 per cent of the Federal ones completed and put in use. Congressional deadline for completion of the program is 13 months from now.

Patman Would Force Banks to Stay Liquid

Representative Patman (Democrat), of Texas, said yesterday he had drafted a bill to prohibit commercial banks from making long-term investments.

"The prime requisite of a good bank is that it shall be liquid—that depositors may get their money on call," Patman said in a statement explaining the measure.

House Acts Today On Pay-Hour Law

mitting open discussion on floor of House."

After piecemeal analysis of the bill, the accompanying statement said, in summary, "the foregoing shows how a great many establishments have been placed under the wages and hours provisions of the fair labor standards act. Exemptions apply only to those engaged in ginning of cotton, cleaning, grading, packing, etc., of fresh vegetables, and in handling, etc., of tobacco. We submit, therefore, that the bill, H. R. 5435, nullifies exemptions existing under present law and that a great many establishments and employes are brought under the act.

Many Products Affected

"The effect of making agricultural establishments subject to wages and hours is also to make them subject to industry committee jurisdiction."

The statement and telegram were signed by:

American Farm Bureau Federation, Edward A. O'Neal, president; National Grange, Fred Brenckman, Washington representative; National Co-operative Milk Producers Federation, Charles W. Holman, secretary; National Co-operative Council, Ezra T. Benson, secretary; Agricultural Producers Labor Committee, Ivan G. McDaniel.

The analysis declared the Norton bill, which will be taken up today, removes exemptions from wage-hour act provisions to greater or lesser degree in handling and processing of the following agricultural products:

Milk, butter, cheese and dairy products; sugar, cotton and cottonseed; fruits and vegetables; nuts; poultry and eggs; grain, dried beans and peas, seeds; hops, fiber and forage crops; honey; livestock, wool, mahair; nursery, horticultural and floral stock.

Designed to reach "hardship" cases brought to light from operation of the act, the bill provides:

Exemption from hours restrictions of all persons receiving regular monthly salaries of $200 or more.

Greater exemptions for processors of agricultural products, especially in harvest seasons.

Exemption from both the wage and hours provisions for workers in small, independent telephone exchanges having fewer than 500 stations or telephone numbers.

Permission for employers to allow time-and-a-half in cash for overtime work.

Other features of the bill would provide for establishment of industry committees for the Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico to recommend specific exemptions for those territories.

500-Pound Safe Theft Nets $50

Thieves who stole a 500-pound safe from the office of the Century Motor Co., 2022 Fourteenth street northwest, last night, obtained only about $50, because of the proprietor's foresight.

The proprietor, George Sterling, 4102 Fourteenth street northwest, sent $650 to his home by messenger shortly before closing time.

Miles Corbin, proprietor of a grocery store at 1334 Thirteenth street northwest, reported to police that his store was entered last night and about $200 in cash and about $50 worth of cigarettes and food stolen.

Keeping Ideal Is Not Enough, Gray Declares

Chancellor Speaks To 100 Graduating From American U.

Constructive participation in national and civic affairs and not mere "holding to the American ideal" is the obligation of every citizens, Chancellor Joseph M. M. Gray, of American University, told 100 graduating students yesterday.

In a baccalaureate address in Metropolitan Methodist Church, Gray warned that "it is terribly easy to hold a great ideal and contradict it by base practice" such as caused the "crimes of Vienna and Prague . . . and Abyssinia and Albania."

Gray stressed the new graduates' "obligation to incarnate and implement democracy . . . so that there shall continue to grow an ideal democracy" but warned about indifference to American national welfare.

"You are in grave danger," he declared, "of defeating your ideal America by becoming too busy with your private affairs, too indifferent, too supercilious, too resentful of the unpleasant . . . to take an intelligent part in the struggle out of which democracy is forever remade."

Following the address, graduates and faculty members gathered at tea in the Women's Residence.

20 Cases Reported In Smallpox Outbreak

Albany, N. Y., June 4 (U.P.).—The number of smallpox cases in an outbreak which threatens to spread across New York State, rose tonight to 20. One new case was reported at Newburgh, where a former inmate of the Onondaga County Jail, near Syracuse, was taken in custody on another charge.

WPA Workers Rally Protests Economy Move

1,200 Meet to Vote Investigations of Congress Committees

Twelve hundred Workers Alliance and trade union members, determined to check Congressional economy measures and save 1,000,000 WPA jobs, yesterday voted to set up a committee to investigate Congressional investigating committees.

The move came at the close of the second day's sessions of the week-long "National Right-to-Work Congress," sponsored by the Workers Alliance. The committee will give special attention to the House sub-committee investigating WPA and the Dies committee. Preempting methods of the Federal Congress, it will take testimony, examine records and hold hearings.

It will try to discover "whether, as has been charged, the WPA Investigating Committee has abused its authority, infringed upon the constitutional rights of citizens, permitted false testimony to be given against citizens and organizations without permitting those involved to refute, and whether it has been biased and prejudiced in its investigations of the WPA program."

"Politicians prattling and mouthing" the self-evident truths of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness are voicing only "empty phrases" when they refuse adequate relief appropriations and thus deny Americans the right to work, Representative Joseph E. Casey (Democrat), of Massachusetts, told delegates earlier in the day.

A main objective of the gathering is passage of Casey's bill providing appropriations for 3,000,000 relief jobs.

Speaking in Governmental Auditorium, Casey declared that Congressmen's experience showed that 99 per cent of WPA applicants were needy, able and willing to work. With 10,000,000 or 11,000,000 unemployed, he said, it is absurd to declare that there are less than 3,000,000 who need and want WPA work. Cutting the relief jobs below that total, he argued, was false economy.

The faults of WPA, Casey said, were created by Congress' own indifference and their solution was Congress' problem. Critics of the relief setup, he concluded, must first defend the indefensible dole system, which they are offering as an economy substitute.

Earlier, at religious services held in the Sylvan Theater, the Rev. Alfred T. Mollegen, of the Alexandria Theological Seminary, told the group that "unemployment is the demagogue's paradise and the Fascist's stepping-stone to power." He said the right-to-work meeting is "another engagement in the battle to maintain and further democracy in the United States."

Last night the congress witnessed a performance of "The Cradle Will Rock," Marc Blitzstein's recent WPA Federal Theater success.

Today delegates, who represent trade unions and workers alliance groups, will visit members of Congress to urge passage of the Casey-Murray bill and a liberalized social security program. In the afternoon Representative John M. Coffee (Democrat), of Washington, and Representative Lee D. Geger (Democrat), of California will address the Congress, which will proceed to passage of keynote resolutions on unemployment and recovery. A professional, educational and cultural session will begin at 8 p. m. All meetings are to be held in Governmental Auditorium. The Congress will adjourn Tom Mooney, scheduled to speak at Friday's labor union sessions of the Congress, will also be heard at the Mayflower Hotel Ballroom at 8:15 p. m. tomorrow at a meeting sponsored by the Washington Tom Mooney Committee. Senator Murray (Democrat), of Montana, will be chairman.

Acquitted Judge To Take Rest

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, June 4.—Kings County Judge George Washington Martin, who was acquitted Saturday night by a Brooklyn blue ribbon jury on charges of bribery, will return to the bench after a rest of three or four weeks, it was announced today by his son, George W. Martin, jr.

Judge Martin's son made the announcement at the jurist's summer home, where Judge Martin was reported by his son to be resting from the effects of his trial, which started May 22.

Adventists Told End of World Is Near

Rev. R. F. Wood Says War Rumors Are Harbingers of Doom

Modern advancement in science and invention is the "sign of the end ofthe world," the Rev. R. F. Woods, pastor of the Staunton (Va.) Seventh Day Adventist Church, yesterday told 2,000 members of his sect at the "Tent City" in Takoma Park, Md.

It was the fourth day of the annual encampment of the Potomac Conference of Seventh Day Adventists. The conclave will adjourn on June 11.

The minister emphasized that "wars and rumors of wars, the Munich Pact, axis, alliances and encirclement" are signs that the second coming of Christ "is very near."

The Rev. C. S. Longacre, religious liberty secretary of the General Conference, advised the young people to "do their part in case of war," but to go into the first aid, ambulance and hospital services. The adventist creed forbids carrying of arms.

War, he said is "very near and the whole world will be in it." The Rev. C. P. Sorensen, young peoples' secretary of the Columbia Union Conference, also spoke at the youth meeting.

In the afternoon, students in Adventist schools exhibited handicraft projects, ranging from needlework to woodcarving. Elder Archer O. Dart, educational secretary of the Potomac Conference, presented 125 gold stars "for good work."

Services will be opened this morning by Dr. R. A. Hare, medical superintendent of the Washington Sanitarium, who will speak on "Moderation in Healthful Living." The Rev. M. L. Andreason, of the Theolical Seminary, will conduct the services.

Entente Sure To Be Formed, Says Daladier

Reiterates France's No to 'Domination;' Denies Encirclement

By the Associated Press.

Paris, June 4.—Premier Daladier predicted today a "prompt and successful conclusion" to efforts to extend the British-French front and again proclaimed France's "no to aggression."

The Premier, who has virtual dictatorial power to rule France by decress until next November, reviewed his leadership of French domestic and foreign policy to the executive committee of his Radical Socialist Party. It was broadcast throughout the nation.

"We say no to aggression," Daladier asserted in measured tones; "we say no to autarchic tyranny, we say no to ideologic fanaticism, we say no to claims of pretended vital space, we say no to all violence and brutality.

To Prevent Domination

"Our refusal is that of all nations attached to peace, that of all free men. It has no other goal than to permit peace to be saved in the honor and independence of all nations."

Daladier said the French government had "exerted all its efforts and still exerts them to permit Europe to live happily in free collaboration," but, he added:

"I want to give an assurance to the world that France is in the front rank of powers which will prevent Europe from being drawn into catastrophe by undertakings of domination."

Refers to Soviet Talks

The premier said he was unable to give a detailed account of latest negotiations abroad since some still were in progress, but asserted "everything permits us to hope for a prompt and succesful conclusion."

Daladier referred here to Britain's efforts, backed by France, to bring Soviet Russia into a three-power mutual assistance accord and to France's efforts to draw up a mutual assistance pact with Turkey paralleling a British-Turkish agreement already concluded.

Moscow's latest note in the protracted negotiations with London—which accepted the principle of mutual assistance but asked guarantees also for Russia's northern neighbors—was expected to be studied tomorrow by the French cabinet.

Force Answers Collaboration

Insisting that French policy did not constitute encirclement, Daladier said "Europe has the choice between collaboration and domination" and "we are for collaboraion, which is the opposite of encirclement."

The French premier declared that "each time we have taken a step in the path of collaboration we have been answered by an action of force."

"Those who gave us their refusal," he charged, "pretended at the same time to forbid us to collaborate with others. This collaboration which they refused is what they call encirclement.

"What more striking proof could they give of their desire for hegemony?

Named Defenders of Liberty

"If they mean to menace the equilibrium and peace of Europe," he continued, "we are justified in resolutely opposing such adventures . . .

"That is why we say yes to all just and constructive undertakings, we say yes to everything which would bring resumption of economic exchanges throughout the world and fairer distribution of raw materials.

"In barring the path of the aggressor and in extending our hand to all those who want real collaboration," Daladier concluded his account of foreign affairs, "we are the defenders of libetry in all acts and undertakings."

Accounting for his internal policy, the premier declared that the French "today are more united than they have been for a long time."

Untroubled, British Say

London, June 4 (AP).—A reliable source said today Soviet Russia's latest terms for a mutual assistance pact among her, Great Britain and France were "not likely to cause much trouble."

This source said the Soviets note of last Friday, replying to French-supported British proposals for an agreement, suggested the three powers should pledge themselves to lend mutual assistance in event of any direct or indirect threat to the independence of any of the signatories.

Use of the words "direct or indirect" would make the pact much stronger than the terms proposed by the British and French, it was said, and was intended to allay fears in Russia that she might be threatened through an attack on Baltic states without being sure of British-French support.

Nothing Definite Expected

Prime Minister Chamberlain was expected to mention the negotiations with Russia when Parliament reconvenes tomorrow after the Whitsun vacation.

Diplomatic sources believed, however, he would not make any definite statement until after the cabinet discusses the Soviet suggestions Wednesday.

Frank May Succeed Von Neurath, Czechs Hear

Prague, June 4 (AP).—It was reported in Prague today that Karl Frank, Konrad Henlein's first lieutenant in winning the Sudetenland for Germany, may succeed Baron Konstantin von Neurath as Reichsprotector of Bohemia and Moravia.

Frank, who had the reputation of being a left-wing Nazi under Henlein, now acts as Von Neurath's secretary of state.

Official Condensed Version Of Hitler Speech to Veterans

Following is a translation of the text of Reichsfuehrer Hitler's speech today to war veterans, as condensed and issued by DNB, German official news agency.

Twenty years ago a miserable political leadership, under pressure which it regarded as irresistible, signed the Treaty of Versailles.

I have formally wiped out the consequences of German signature to the dictate of Versailles.

Now one fact must be clear. It is that responsibility for starting a war is indivisibly bound up with definite war objectives.

No people or government makes war for war's sake. Only in perverse Jewish literature is there to be found an expression of the nation that war is conducted merely to make blood flow.

It is important to note that before 1914 Germany had no program which was to be attained by the instrumentality of war. Even during the war itself it never managed to draw up a precise rational war objective.

But the Treaty of Versailles demonstrated what were the real war aims of the French and British encirclement politicians of that time.

They were the robbery of the German colonies, destruction of German commerce, and annihilation of the German merchant fleet and thereby of the fundamental basis of German existence, and frustration of German political aspirations—in other words, the same objectives which animate the encirclement politicians of today.

Unfortunately there were in Germany at that time men who did not credit the contentions of extremist English newspapers and politicians that from the British point of view it was necessary to take away Germany's colonies and destroy her commerce.

But the World War and the dictate of Versailles taught the German people otherwise. What previously seemed to be expressions of hate by irresponsible journalists were actually the goal of British encirclement politicians of 1914.

It is well for us to remember that these war objectives of our opponents, later written into the Treaty of Versailles, stood in opposition to an utter lack of program on the German side. There was not only no German objective, but Germany was even unprepared for an adequate defense.

If, in spite of these circumstances, the World War is to us a source of proud memories, it is due to the inner worth of the German military organization, which was exceeded in numbers by our opponents, but which was of a quality never attained by the enemy.

Looking back on those great days must lead all of us to one firm conviction—a conviction that the German people may look to its past and especially to the years of the World War with the greatest pride.

I see in my memory of four years of war, in which I had the fortune to participate, a firm basis for my faith in my German people, and as a soldier, for confidence in myself.

My memory of those years gives me, because of familiarity with the horror of war, a deep desire for peace—but this memory also convinces me of the ability of the German soldier to defend our rights.

We are unimpressed by threats no matter from what quarter they come.

Another conviction springing from war memories is a firm determination never frivolously to permit the Reich's interests to be defenseless as was the case in 1914.

If the English encirclement policy remains what it was in 1914, it must be observed that German defense policy has been fundamentally altered.

The spirit of Bethmann-Hollweg does not animate German policy any more.

[Theobald von Bethmann-Hollweg was chancellor of Germany from 1909 to 1917.]

I have seen to it that anyone who has anything to do with the leadership of the state is a 100 per cent man and a soldier. If ever I observe that any person cannot measure up to these responsibilities he will be dismissed from his post—no matter who he may be.

It is our responsibility to strengthen the nation's will and ability to defend itself. It is my belief that this policy will be approved especially by old soldiers.

Our national socialism, which issued from the war, is nothing more than an impression on our whole life of a will to fight for and defend the people and state.

It is my unalterable determination to see to it that the highest leadership of the state and army thinks with the courage of the simple musketeer, who, without thought of self, gives up his life if orders require him to do so.

Fliers Blazing Indian Ocean Trail

Port Hedland, Australia, June 4 (AP).—The flying boat Guba left at 10:30 a. m. G. M. T. (4:30 a. m. E. S. T.) today on the second leg of a proposed flight by easy stages to blaze an air trail from Sydney to Mombasa, Kenya Coloney, 500 miles over the Indian Ocean.

Lewis A. Yancey, American aviator, who flew the Atlantic to Rome in 1929, is the navigator, and Russell Rogers, another American, is the first pilot.

In Plaster Cast, Model Refuses Bid to Meet King

Newark, N. J., June 4 (INS).—Virginia Rogers did something today which no other woman in America has done. She declined an invitation to meet the King and Queen of England at the Roosevelt home next Sunday.

But she did it because she is confined to her bed in a plaster cast.

Miss Rogers, who is a model, lives with her mother, Mrs. Florence Rogers. She fractured her spine when she fell from a horse on a polo field. A friend offered to have her transported to Hyde Park in a special car. But she was forced to decline.

"It wouldn't be any fun," she said. "I must lie on my back most of the time."

Farmer Accused of Drowning Grandson, 3

Granby, Quebec, June 4 (U.P.).—Francis Sevigny, 58-year-old farmer, was in custody tonight charged with drowning his 3-year-old grandson, Robert Taylor, because he was tired of supporting him.

Police said Sevigny confessed he drowned the child in a creek and hid the body in a ditch.

objectives which animate the encirclement politicians of today."

"If the English encirclement policy remains what it was in 1914," Hitler added, "it must be observed that German defense policy has been fundamentally altered."

(Hitler on several occasions has charged that British-French efforts to build a bloc of nations, described by their leaders as a "peace front," actually were an attempt to "encircle" Germany and Italy.

(Speaking at Wilhelmshaven, April 1, Hitler declared, "Germany will stand neither for intimidation nor encirclement.")

Contrasted with the will of national Socialist Germany "to fight for and defend the people and state," Hitler pictured Germany before 1914 as "even unprepared for adequate defense."

D.C. 'Frightens' Royalty, Says Lady in Waiting

Reports of Roosevelt Charm Help Allay Fears of Rulers

By Inez Robb.

Distributed by International News Service.

On Royal Pilot Train en Route Sudbudy, Canada, June 4.—The King and Queen are looking forward to their four-day visit in the United States as the greatest experience of their lives, although both Their Majesties "are a little frightened because of all the ceremony at Washington."

Lady Nunburnholme, beautiful chief lady in waiting to Her Majesty, revealed this when she asked your correspondent to show her through the royal pilot train so she might know how reporters (the other half) live during the royal tour.

"This is an entirely different experience from that of the coronation," said Lady Nunburnholme in her pleasantly clipped British accent. "That was England and, after all, the coronation has gone on for a thousand years. But this visit to the United States by a King and Queen has never been done before you know.

"Like anyone else about to pass through their greatest experience, Their Majesties are wondering what the American visit will be like," the slim, tall Lady Nunburnholme told myself and another American woman reporter, Miss Grace Davidson, of the Boston Post.

"Ambassador Kennedy told them that the American visit would be "simply thrilling," and while Their Majesties realize that, still they are a bit frightened by it all. They think Washington must be a very beautiful city, but the ceremony, the parade and all that is rather frightening, isn't it?" anxiously asked the lady-in-waiting who has seen more flashing uniforms, gold braid, brass hats and profound ceremonial in Canada's tank towns than Washington, D. C., could muster up in a decade.

It is obvious that Ambassador Kennedy gave Their Majesties a preview of their American trip—a sort of dress rehearsal—with helpful hints before they sailed. And it is also patent that the legend of the Roosevelt charm is well-known on board the royal train.

"The King and Queen are eagerly awaiting their meeting with President Roosevelt," said Lady Nunburnholme as she sat in the club of the royal pilot train and became acquainted with that great American drink, the Cuba Libre, mixed, if I say it myself, with these two tiny hands.

"We have all heard that the President has tremendous personality and that no one can resist his charm. Is it true that he has such a marvelous sense of humor?" she inquired. We assured her that he has.

We have heard that both the President and Mrs. Roosevelt are good fun," said Lady Dunburnholme with a spark of hope animating her lovely face. "The King and Queen like to read the amusing, humorous stories about themselves, just as we hear President Roosevelt likes to read the funny stories about himself. The humorous stories written about Their Majesties and the royal tour are something to make us laugh. And we need something to make us smile after all the official ceremonies are over at the end of the day."

D.C. to Rehearse For Royal Visit

Bridge Station, Niagara Falls, N. Y.

Secretary Hull will be introduced to King George and his consort by Sir Ronald Lindsay, and the American, in turn, will present to Their Majesties, his fellow-countrymen on the reception committee—George Summerlin, Chief of Protocol; Maj. Gen. Hugh S. Drum, designated as military aide to the King, and Rear Admiral James O. Richardson, Naval aide.

Border ceremonies concluded by 10 a. m. Wednesday, the royal party and the vanguard of their hosts will turn south, to a Capital awaiting their coming with keenest anticipation.

2 Chances for Good Look

As the elite of Capital society and officialdom prepare for face-to-face encounter with the British rulers, Mr. and Mrs. John Doe, of Washington, can take their choice of at least two chances for a good look at the King and Queen of England.

Besides the parade route for Thursday morning, a block-by-block description of one or more of the trips to be taken by the British rulers during their two-day visit here will be announced in advance. The Post learned last night.

Although the royal party will move from engagement to engagement with none of the pageantry planned for their progress from Union Station to the White House, it is estimated that at least 50,000 persons would gather along the route to cheer the King and Queen on such a trip as they will make from the White House to the British Embassy at 4:45 p. m. Thursday.

Whether this route is one to be made public was not disclosed last night, but officials pointed out that times of arrival and departure for all points on the royal itinerary through the Capital "are no secret." As for the streets to be traveled between one point and another, it was suggested that "a certain amount of guesswork might pay dividends." outside the White House, British Embassy and Capitol and along adjoining avenues as the sovereigns follow out their schedule.

On these occasions, however, the public will catch only a fleeting glimpse of Their Majesties. Advance announcement of the full route for at least one of the trips within the city, combined with a reduction in speed of the royal automobiles to parade pace, is intended to afford a clear and unhurried view of the King and Queen to any who might miss the reception Thursday morning.

"We want to keep obstructions down to a minimum," one official explained last night. "Our policy is to permit as many people as possible to get a really good look."

Announcement of the second "parade" will be made today, simultaneous with orders for protection of the route, expected to involve a large part of the police force.

100,000 to See Procession

Meanwhile, officials discounted fears that only a small fraction of the huge crowd expected to welcome the royal visitors will be able to see Thursday morning's parade.

Behind the steel cables and manila rope protecting the parade route, there is room for at least 100,000 spectators to take positions within 30 yards of the passing procession, according to Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police. A half million, he believes, will be able to find somewhat less favorable vantage points in rear rows of the ranks of spectators along Pennsylvania avenue, in the park space southwest of Union Station and in the intersecting streets sloping down to Pennsylvania avenue from the north.

This latter class of spectators, though they may miss some details of the pageantry, "will see enough to make it worthwhile," one official pointed out.

Alexandrians were assured yesterday by Police Capt. William H. Arnold that they will be given "a good look" at the royal motorcade when it passes through the historic Virginia city Friday afternoon en route from Mount Vernon to Arlington Cemetery. Police orders for controlling Alexandria's section of the route will be announced today, Capt. Arnold said.

Will Review Scouts

Proud of being the only group of American citizens to be reviewed by the King and Queen during their stay here, more than 13,000 Boy and Girl Scouts and their leaders will begin perfecting the schedule for the 120 seconds when the monarchs will drive through their uniformed ranks at 4:45 p. m. Thursday.

Boy Scouts, Cubs, Rovers and Sea Scouts from Washington and 14 counties in nearby Maryland and Virginia will line the south side of the roadway leading from the south portico of the White House to the southwest gate, when Their Majesties leave for the garden party at the British Embassy. Girl Scouts will wall in the northern side of the driveway.

Sixty candidates, nominated by 22 councils of the National Capital Area Council, will be reviewed at 8 p. m. tonight at Scout headquarters, before officials select 12 members of the guard of honor which will occupy a prominent position in the royal review.

they looked out over a crowd the rear ranks of which could not be seen, a crowd made up largely of Finns, Ukrainians and other European immigrants who were shouting as lustily as did any of the broad-a patriots in Ottawa or Victoria.

The 3-Minute Handshake

"We want our King, we want our Queen!" they yelled.

"Such was the uproar that even the Queen's two maids, who were making up Her Majesty's bed, took a peep out of the curtained windows.

The King and Queen, obviously delighted, smiled and waved in the glare of a spotlight that was turned on the platform. Then came the customary presentation of the town officials and their curtsying wives, and one of the most amusing incidents of the tour.

One official had just shaken the King's hand and grasped the Queen's hand. They asked him a question, probably about a war medal on his breast, and the official entered into a conversation with His Majesty that must have lasted fully three minutes. The Queen continued pumping the fellow's hand but could not see his face until the King allowed him to walk on.

Train Has to Be Moved

When the handclasp, probably the longest an English Queen ever gave a commoner, was over, the King and Queen went down to mingle in the seething mob, trailed by Scotland Yard men who had heard Melville was a Communist stronghold and were obviously worried. The war veterans, with their berets and medals, surged toward the King, while the fond mammas of Melville closed in on the Queen, shoving forward their children in the hope of a royal handclasp. The Queen did shake hands with about six little girls, thereby assuring their status in prairie society forever.

George and Elizabeth went to their train, but remained on the platform as the crowd sang "God Save the King." Nor could they go in after that. The war veterans went from the anthem to President Roosevelt's favorite, "Home On the Range." After that they sang "Tipperary," "The Old Gray Mare Ain't What She Used to Be," and "Long Long Trail."

It was obvious that the King and Queen would never be able to sleep in Melville and finally the Royal Train had to be moved about 2 miles outside the town. Newspaper reporters on the pilot train, already in their berths, looked out to see the British sovereigns still standing in the chill night air, waving and smiling, as they moved away in the gloom. The farmers, their wives and daughters went into Melville to find all of its food gone, and then spent the night, most of them, sleeping in their automobiles.

King Films Dog

Rolling across Saskatchewan and Manitoba and into Ontario, the blue and silver train passed thousands of cheering and flag-waving Canadians, some of them in crowds, many more in little family groups.

Dogs raced after the train, and the King occasionally matched the speed of his camera lens with them. Farmers who came down to the Canadian National tracks in their buckboards often had the Union Jack flying from dobbin's bridle.

In Winnipeg the King and Queen made an unscheduled stop at the terminal to shake hands with 125 disabled war veterans whom they had missed on their way through there on the journey to the Pacific.

Prince Georges Asks Lower Transit Fares

Business Group Would Shift Hearings To Hyattsville

PRINCE GEORGES COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST, Telephone GReenwood 3559.

Demands that hearings on requested changes in the Capital Transit Co. suburban service be shifted from Baltimore to Hyattsville will be made by the directors of the Prince Georges Chamber of Commerce at their meeting at 7:30 tonight in Hyattsville's telephone building.

The hearings are scheduled for June 19.

C. D. Anderson, secretary of the organization, stated yesterday that the chamber, before the June 19 meeting, would probably present to the public service commission requests for longer Maryland zones, lower fares and a local Maryland pass, in order that the commission would have both utility's and riders viewpoints to consider.

To Decide Tonight

The directors will reach a decision on this question tonight.

The hearings will be held on the request of Capital Transit for changes in service incidental to its establishment in Mt. Rainier of a turn-around which would permit the new type street cars to be operated from Washington as far as the District Line, from which point buses would operate to various Maryland communities.

Members of the chamber unanimously voted last month to request the commission to permit their organization to appear "as an interested party" at any transportation hearings.

Rescuer Lassoes Hiker, Drags Him Up 450-Foot Cliff

Nyack, N. Y., June 4 (AP).—A hiker wedged helplessly between two rocks at the foot of a 450-foot cliff was extricated today and pulled to safety by a half-inch rope which, for 40 tense minutes, his rescuers feared might break and drop him back into the chasm.

Robert Gordon, 24, of New York City, was walking alone on a trail at Hook Mountain Park when he slipped and fell. His arms were pinned to his body in a crevice.

Unable to keep a safe foothold on the narrow trail 10 feet above Gordon, police attempted vainly to lasso Gordon with a 600-foot rope from the top of the 450-foot cliff. Carl Wilson, of Pearl River, stepped out from several hundred bystanders, snared Gordon's shoulders and, 4½ hours after he fell, the hiker finally was inched to safety.

3 Supreme Court Justices to Hear Manton's Appeal

New York, June 4 (INS).—Three of the only nine men in the country who outrank the position held by Martin T. Manton as senior United States circuit judge will probably constitute a special court to hear his appeal from the jury verdict which found him guilty Saturday of selling his judicial opinions for vast sums of money, it was indicated tonight.

Only members of the United States Supreme Court are qualified to hear the appeal, without embarrassment or illegality. Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes and Attorney General Frank Murphy are expected to confer on a choice of three justices to sit as a special court in the case.

Likely choices are Associate Justices Harlan Fiske Stone, of New York, to head the tribunal; Owen J. Roberts, of Pennsylvania; Hugo L. Black, Stanley F. Reed and William O. Douglas.

Harvard Student Arrested After Crash Injures Girl

Boston, June 4 (U.P.).—Horace B. Bent, of Bethlehem, Pa., wealthy Harvard law student, was arrested on a drunkenness charge following an automobile accident in which a Boston post-debutante was injured critically today.

Miss Mary L. (Polly) Howell, 22, sustained a broken collar bone and internal injuries. Her personal physician described her condition as "critical."

Others in the car which police said Bent was operating at the time it struck a parked automobile were William H. Clark, 24, of New York City, also a Harvard law student; Nelson W. Aldrich, 28-year-old Harvard clubman, cousin of Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, jr., and grandson of the late Senator Aldrich of Providence, R. I., and Miss Mary Slingluff of Boston.

John Roosevelt's Wife Recovering

Boston, June 4 (U.P.).—The condition of Mrs. John Roosevelt, 22-year-old wife of the President's youngest son, was described tonight as "very satisfactory."

Mrs. Roosevelt, the former Anne Clark, was confined to Richardson House of the Boston Lying-in Hospital, where her first son died at birth Friday.

not run again for that office in any circumstances.

One wing of the New Deal camp, elated over Murphy's drive against municipal and judicial corruption, has begun booming the Attorney General for second place on the "Roosevelt Ticket." The Murphy-for-Vice President boosters hold him up as a sure-fire antidote for New York's crusading district attorney, Thomas Dewey, should Dewey capture the Republican Presidential or Vice Presidential nomination.

For 'Draft Roosevelt'

New York, June 4 (U.P.).—Raymond M. Schwartz, acting as secretary in formation of a coalition of progressives of all parties to organize a national "Draft Roosevelt" campaign, today issued a statement of the progressives' aims as a result of revelation by supporters of Vice President John N. Garner that he will seek the Democratic Presidential nomination next year.

"We expected this 'Stop Roosevelt' move," Schwartz said. "Arrangements have been going forward for some time. Invitations for the progressive conference from June 28 to 30 went out in some cases as early as a week ago, although some are still being mailed, to about 175 leading progressives in over 35 States. Judging by the rate the acceptances are coming in, an even 1,000 leaders will attend the three sessions at the end of the month.

"No third party is intended and no third party will be established. We will organize within the framework of both major parties and other forces as well. Naturally, we will draw most of our strength from the Democratic Party and independents and progressives inside and outside its ranks. That party will be almost solid for Roosevelt in 1940.

"If there is going to be any third party the Garner forces will have to start it."

Sent Wire to Garner

In this connection, Schwartz said he had sent a telegram to Garner, saying he had received an invitation to join in the movement to "draft" Garner, but that he had to refuse because he was committed to Mr. Roosevelt for a third term.

Schwartz said that as a personal choice for a Democratic candidate after Mr. Roosevelt he would take Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia.

Schwartz made public the list of those progressive leaders invited to the conference. Among them were Mayor Maury Maverick, of San Antonio, Tex.; Jerome Frank, Lloyd K. Garrison; Senator Bone, of Washington; David Dubinsky, head of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union; John L. Lewis and Philip Murray, of the C. I. O.; John G. Winant, Thomas R. Amlie, Secretary of Interior Ickes, Representative Marcantonio, New York, City, and Senator Schwellenbach, of Washington.

Legion Reburies Southern Veteran Of Gettysburg

Hagerstown, Md., June 4 (AP).—A Confederate soldier killed 76 years ago at Gettysburg, Pa., was solemnly reburied in the Confederate Cemetery today in celebration of Confederate Memorial Day.

The unidentified infantry officer was found in a shallow grave on the Gettysburg battlefield last summer by workmen digging water lines for the camp for veterans at the seventy-fifth anniversary celebration.

The grave, about 16 inches deep, was 150 yards northwest of "the Angle." After the identification was made, by means of a button nearby, the bones were turned over to Superintendent John Kyd Beckenbaugh, of the Antietam Battlefield Cemetery, who suggested they be reburied on the Southerners' Memorial Day.

Antique and Hobby Show Extends Schedule

Berkeley Springs, W. Va., June 4. The Potomac Antique and Hobby Show, making its first showing here and projected as an annual affair, has extended its schedule through the present week and next Sunday because of demand, Mrs. Ward W. Keesecker, chairman, said today.

The exhibits, representing an estimated value of $10,000, are being shown in "The Castle," medieval-like stone building nestling against the hillside overlooking this summer resort town, which was lent for the affair by Dr. Ward W. Keesecker, assistant United States Commissioner of Education, and Mrs. Keesecker, of Alexandria, Va.

The exhibit is open on week-days from 10 a. m. until 9 p. m. and on Sunday from 1 to 10 p. m.

Winchester, Va., June 4.—Members of Hickory Camp, Woodmen of the World, this afternoon conducted memorial rites at Mount Hebron Cemetery for six members who died in the last year.

Maryland U. Plans Special Short Course

Rural Women to Hear Experts in Both Research, Practice

By the Associated Press.

College Park, Md., June 4.—Research leaders and experts in every phase of farm life will constitute the faculty for the annual rural women's short course at the University of Maryland, to be held this year June 12 to 17 with the theme "Wider Horizons."

Approximately 800 women are expected to attend the short course in music appreciation, public speaking, parliamentary law, home economics, landscape gardening, leadership development, recreation and approved English. All the courses were designed to make farm life fuller, more comfortable and more prosperous.

Mrs. Ikko Gregor, of the O'Hara School of Flower Arrangement, is one of the experts invited to give a course. Others will include T. Roy Brooks, master of the Maryland Grange; P. C. Turner, president of the Maryland Farm Bureau; Mrs. Mildred Coe Gavin, of the Washington College of Music; Mrs. Maud F. Robey, former vice president of the National Story League; Charles S. Smith, former chief of the Associated Press foreign service; Dr. Arthur M. Shipley, surgeon in chief of the Maryland University Hospital, and Dr. Esther L. Richards, associate in psychiatry of Johns Hopkins University.

Miss Venia M. Keller, assistant director of the university extension service, is directing the course, and the students will be greeted by Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the university.

11 Hurt, Including 7 Girl Scouts, In Train Collision

Lake Hopatcong, N. J., June 4 (AP).—Eleven persons were injured and almost 400 homeward-bound World's Fair visitors milled in panic in the eerie light of blazing cars today as a Lackawanna Railroad excursion train crashed into the rear of a 96-car freight train near here today.

Three cars of the excursion train bound for Scranton, Pa., carried Girl Scouts and there were also 90 boys aboard. Seven Girl Scouts, two of the freight train crew and two men passengers in the excursion train were injured and taken to Dover General Hospital.

The stove inside the excursion train set fire to the caboose and the flames spread quickly to the other three derailed freight cars, lighting up the countryside and adding to the terror of the passengers.

2 British Officers Held by Japanese Reported Safe

Peping, China (Monday), June 5 (AP).—The British Embassy today reported two British army officers detained by Japanese at Kalgan were safe and well but that it was without information as to when they would be released.

The embassy statement was made following the return of two colleagues on an unsuccessful attempt to see the detained officials, Lieut. Col. C. R. Spear, military attache, and Lieut. John Cooper, a British language student.

Col. Spear was said to have been held by the Japanese since May 26. Lieut. Cooper was detained when he went to Kalgan from Peiping May 28 to investigate Col. Spear's detention.

Farley Calls For Rebirth of Moral Values

Conway, Ark., June 4 (AP).—Postmaster General Farley today urged the application of basic Christian principles and "a rebirth of moral and spiritual values" as mankind's most pressing current needs.

Receiving an honorary degree of doctor of laws from Hendrix College, a Methodist Church school, Farley, chairman of the Democratic National Committee and leading Catholic layman, told the graduates:

"I think the time is now ripe for us to give continued consideration to supporting our Constitution by following the doctrines which Christ taught while on earth."

Gov. O'Conor To Parole 5 Prisoners

Will Pardon One Convict, Commute Term of Another

Annapolis, June 4.—Gov. O'Conor today announced he would parole five prisoners now in State institutions, would reduce the sentence of another and pardon another.

Those paroled were: Lowndes Morsell, serving one year for larceny of tobacco in Calvert County; William Stefkowich, serving a year for assault on his wife in Baltimore County; Randolph Whelen, 3 years for larceny of tobacco; Albert Ross, a year for larceny, and John Fletcher, a year for receiving stolen goods in Wicomico County.

The 20-year sentence imposed on Gene L. Magnani in Baltimore County was reduced to 10 years and Tobias Vinnick, Baltimore, was pardoned. He was released on parole in 1924 after serving nine months of a two-year sentence and the pardon will restore his citizenship rights.

1,860 Bottles Of Wine, Brandy Are Stolen at Fair

New York, June 3.—The first robbery of any size within the World's Fair Grounds was revealed today when it was disclosed that thieves had stolen 1,860 bottles of assorted wines and brandy from a storehouse in the international area, where it had been placed pending release to the Rumania House Restaurant.

A valuation of $3,000 was placed on the stolen liquor, but it was pointed out that this was the wholesale price and that the retail value was much higher. Other cases of liquor, of an unestimated value, were not touched by the robbers.

The stolen liquor, all imported from Rumania, included 1,100 bottles, in 22 cases of 50 bottles each, of a Rumanian champagne labeled "Rhein extra Roumania sec very dry."

Italy's Claims, Says Report, Are Mostly Strategic

By International News Service.

Italy's success in obtaining its demands on France for concessions in Africa will provide the "real test" of the Italo-German alliance, in opinion of the Foreign Policy Association.

An association report, prepared by Vera Micheles Dean, asserted that Italy's claims, which officially" include Tunisia, Djibouti and the Suez Canal, are "primarily strategic."

"Relatively weak in military and economic power," the report said, "Fascist Italy has attempted to overcome this handicap by acquiring strategic positions from which, with a comparatively small expenditure of men and material, it could menace the communications of France and Britain.

Divers to Tunnel Under Squalus

Portsmouth, N. H., June 4 (INS).—Work of salvaging the sunken submarine Squalus, tomb of 26 men, moved steadily forward today with the announcement by Navy officials that divers, tomorrow, would begin tunneling under the ill-fated craft, embedded in mud 243 feet below the surface off the Isles of Shoals.

The dangerous job of blowing tunnels is to enable the divers to attach chains to the hull and pontoons.

Kidnaped? Boys Just Cautious

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, June 4.—Two boys reported missing from their homes Saturday night were found early today bound hand and foot at the bottom of a hole several feet deep in Riverside Park. They said they had been seized by "two Spanish boys," but later admitted kidnaping themselves to avoid a spanking for having stayed out too late.

RIVIERA'S LOVELY DISCOVERY: Maestro Pete Macias, of the Lounge Riviera, has just presented Washington with a new top-flight singer in the pretty person of Peggy Fleming. One of the happiest facts about Peggy is that she's a "native daughter," fresh from Eastern High School. Her voice is delightful—pellucid and sweet, with an added dividend of haunting quality. Also, she can "sell a song" remarkably well for one so young.

Riviera's "summer opening party" was a pack-'em-in picture of jollity, with everyone having a swell time, tables harder to find than diamonds.

DANCING DRESS CREATOR: All those swishy and brilliant frocks worn by Frances Woods (see picture above) when she dances on the Shoreham Terrace, have been concocted by her own skillful fingers. Just before coming to the Shoreham this season, she made 12 evening gowns in as many weeks. She wears them all on the Terrace, using a different dress for each show.

N. B. Katheryn Smith, tap-toe dancer and daughter of the famed boxer, Joe Smith, joins the Terrace show this week. Held over are Woods and Bray, "Ferdinand, the Bull" and the "Mad Musician."

Woods and Bray, who are now dancing in the spotlight on the Shoreham Terrace

PIRATES SALUTE ROYALTY: Because of the impending visit of England's King and Queen, the Pirates' Den will remain open for this week. Says Capt. Don Dickerman, "We're the 'Forty Phantom Pirates of Sir Henry Morgan,' who was knighted and made Governor of Jamaica by the King of England 250 years ago. On old Sir Henry's account, we owe a tribute to the present King and Queen. So the Pirates' Den will dispense high hospitality and jollity during the royal visit."

P. S.—Wouldn't it be nice if King George should knight Capt. Don?

"SWEET CIDER" PROVES HARD. That tinkling tune, "Sweet Cider Time When You were Mine," tripped up all contestants in the King Cole Room's "Tune Guessing Contest." Even the Georgetown undergraduate who won the contest couldn't identify "Sweet Cider."

SUGAR CANE IN BAMBOO GARDENS: A glossy new revue, headed by Paul Kane and his "Sugar Canes," opens in Bamboo Gardens today. Dancers Dick and Evelyn Barclay, presenting ballroom numbers in swing style, are also stars of the show. The "Sugar Canes" come direct from Chicago, which is now giving Broadway some killing competition in producing smart floor shows.

SNOWBALLS AND SWING: Metronome's new combination of sizzling music and frosty surroundings is just what the doctor ordered for the town's diversion seekers. The room has been packed since its opening, with folks expressing equal approval of the Penguins' lively rhythms and that refreshing setting of snowdrifts and icebergs, also surprise that cellophane can look so much like sleet.

COLLEGE SWINGSTERS: Wally Stoefler's orchestra, which comes to Glen Echo tonight, was organized as an all-undergraduate dance band five years ago. Most of the original boys are still with the orchestra, which zoomed upward like a racing plane as its reputation grew for presenting keenly stylized dance music. P. S. Houston Davis, the Stoefler drummer, holds the world's record for a drum roll. He won it by smacking the traps steadily for six hours, 30 minutes and 20 seconds.

THELMA MITCHELL, pretty songstress, with Wally Stoefler's orchestra at Glen Echo

"SUMMERTIME" STAYS: Lotus' colorful "Summertime Revue" will remain for another week. This comes under the head of happy news, since it is one of the gayest shows of the season, has an especially high amusement content. The adagio trio of Brent, DeWald and Madeline will be added to the revue, also the beauty chorus will do a new high kick number.

CUSTOMERS' PREFERENCES: Frank Flanagan's (Rainbow Room) singing of "Beer Barrel Polka." Frank's just graduated from bass slapping into one of the town's most popular singers. His hearty, jovial style is a "natural" for "B. B. Polka."

Also, the aforesaid "Beer Barrel Polka" as rolled out with a bang by Dick Koons' Glee Club in the Mayflower Lounge. The Mayflower orchestra is the only one in town where every musician is also a singer.

Marty Rubin's lightly improper songs at Griffith Farms Tavern. The customers seem to think each one is funnier than the one before.

RELAXING WEEK-END. When asked why she always looks fresh as a bunch of daisies, Singer Louanna, of the Mayfair, claims it must be due to the complete rest she takes on week-ends. She says that she goes to sleep at midnight on Saturdays, doesn't get up until 3 o'clock on Monday afternoons. Are we expected to believe this?

MOVEABLE ROOF GARDEN: Never give a thought to the weather when planning to go to the Roger Smith roof garden. It doesn't make a mite of difference if it rains, hails or thunders. For Steve Le Sieur and his orchestra and all of the roof patrons just pick up and go downstairs to the handsome and air-cooled Cafe Caprice.

GIRL NIGHT SPOT OWNER: Edith Bailey the piquant pretty who runs the checking concession at Hi Hat, used to operate a night club of her own at Pine hurst, N. C. She's also been associated with New York's Village Barn and the Drake Hotel in Chicago. But she thinks that the Washington night spot crowds are the most colorful in the country.

Prettiest Night View possible is the vista from the Terrace at Maryland Club Gardens over the illuminated pool. But a lot of the M. C. Gardens visitors seem to like the view over the horse shoe bar, too.

FATHER NEPTUNE GOES GAY: The high-test rumba specialty just introduced by Rita Lopez in the Neptune Room will transfer you mentally right down to the carefree Caribbean. Your mood will call for a "Pearl of Havana" cocktail. It's made of bacardi, pineapple juice and lime, tastes celestial.

Insurance Death Case to Go on Trial This Week

Philadelphia, June 4 (AP).—The insurance murder case, under investigation for nearly nine months, goes into court this week for the first of a new series of trials that the prosecution expects to last all summer.

Rafaele Polselli, 57, will be taken on Friday before a board of three judges who will hear the testimony and then pass sentence.

Polselli, described by investigators as a "messenger boy" for the poison ring, pleaded guilty May 25 to murder indictments in the poison deaths of Giuseppe di Martini and Charles Ingrao.

Sad Over Leaving Home, Man, 75, Shoots 3 Tenants

Marysville, Calif., June 4 (INS).—Believed to have gone insane from brooding over the necessity of leaving the home where he had lived all his life, O. C. Gundry, 75, today shot and wounded a school teacher and his wife and child, who had just leased the Gundry home in Brown's Valley.

The victims were: Allen Harvey, 41, near death with a bullet in his spine. Mrs. Harvey, 39, shot three times in the body. John Harvey, 8, shot in the thigh.

As Harvey lay wounded on the floor, his wife, bleeding from three wounds, grappled with the mad gunman and thrust the boy under the bed to save him.

Peace Front Is New League, Briton Says

Based on Self-Interest, With Definite Ties, Duff-Cooper Asserts

By Alfred Duff-Cooper.
Special Dispatch to The Post.

London, June 4.—Somewhere at the bottom of the Atlantic Ocean lie the remains of the Titanic, the great liner representing the last word in shipbuilding, fitted with every modern invention and adorned with all that luxury could demand or art could offer and doomed to meet with destruction on her first voyage. On the shores of the Lake of Geneva, as derelict as a lost liner, lies the imposing edifice of the League of Nations, conceived with such high hopes just 20 years ago and having failed so lamentably in the task for which it was constructed.

Because millions of people in all the countries embraced the ideals of the League of Nations with enthusiasm and because the vast majority of the nations regarded the league with mild approval, they will doubtless be shocked to read the blunt statement that the league is as dead as mutton.

Chaco First Failure

The first sympton of the malady that killed the league was the war of the Gran Chaco. This war between Bolivia and Paraguay, carried on in the center of South America, aroused little interest in Europe, and the league, beyond making inquiries and issuing reports, did very little to check it. The reason for such inactivity was simple. Nothing could stop the war except the application of force and to apply force was the business of nobody.

The next intimation that something was wrong with the league followed . . . Japan's interference with China. Much greater interest was aroused. Many European countries have interests in China. None have greater interests than Great Britain. The League was deeply stirred, and on this occasion went so far as to condemn the aggressor. But once again nothing was done about it and the aggressor could afford to laugh at the condemnation, knowing that nobody was prepared to apply force.

Then followed the invasion of Abyssinia. For the first time a European power was directly concerned. The feelings of Europe were roused. There was considerable indignation and it was felt by many that the supreme test for the League of Nations had arrived. The League reacted more violently than ever before and went so far as to apply economic sanctions against Italy. The sanctions failed, the League was defeated, and from thence forward its days were numbered.

The death certificate was provided by the events of last September when, during the gravest international crisis that has arisen since 1914, it was never even suggested that the League of Nations should be consulted, although Czecho-Slovakia was a prominent and active member and although the League Assembly was actually sitting at the time.

The League failed because it forgot that no nation would fight save for its own interests. The League failed, and because of its failure the international situation has rapidly deteriorated.

The events of March and April made plain the presence of the void and the urgent need of filling it.

Peace Front to Replace League

It has been filled with commendable rapidity. Where there was nothing three months ago there are already Poland, Greece, Rumania, Turkey, and Soviet Russia is looming into sight. All thees countries are bound to Great Britain and Great Britain to them. It is a new league and it is formed on the secure basis of self-interest.

The obligations in this new league are no longer limitless and vague, but definite and binding. We know exactly what we have to do and in what circumstances we have to do it. We have learned from failure. We have formed a new club with stricter rules.

The membership is at present limited, but it is not exclusive. Perhaps the day may come—and we all hope it will—when those nations whose acts of aggression have caused the formation of the club will themselves apply for membership. We shall closely scrutinize their credentials, but if we are satisfied of their sincere intention to observe the rules and to prove desirable members we shall not refuse them admittance.

Pope Suggests Five-Power Peace Parley

Held Effort to Forestall Soviet, Anglo-French Entente

Vatican City, June 4 (U.P.).—Pope Pius has forwarded new instructions to papal nuncios in Rome, Berlin, Paris and Warsaw and to the apostolic delegate in London in an endeavor to promote a conference of the powers to discuss the present international situation, it was understood authoritatively tonight.

The Pope was described as pleased by reaction to his recent peace overtures. High prelates recalled that in his speech to the Sacred College of Cardinals last Friday the Pope declared there would be "further manifestations of our earnest solicitude" in inducing the governments of Europe to reach a stable peace which would safeguard the liberty and honor of nations.

It was asserted the Pope was particularly anxious to persuade the rulers of the five nations mentioned above that they must put peace at the head of the true interests of their peoples before the projected alliance of Britain and France with Russia is consummated.

It was understood he had decided the present moment to be most opportune to continue his peace efforts which, if successful, Vatican intimates now believe, may result in a five-power meeting ooner than generally had been expected.

Refugee Liner Circles Aimlessly

der surveillance. After about two hours the St. Louis lifted its anchor and resumed its slow cruise toward the southeast.

That is the direction of Cuba, where attorneys for agencies interested in the refugees' welfare were reported negotiating with the government to permit them to land. The ship left Hamburg May 15 for Havana, and was forced to sail from the Cuban capital Friday by orders of President Laredo Bru.

At nightfall the Coast Guard boat reported it was dropping the trail of the liner and returning to its Fort Lauderdale base. The St. Louis then was about 10 miles offshore from the Florida Keys, continuing its southeasterly course.

Immigration Inspector Walter B. Thomas said the craft, with no clearance papers from Havana to a United States port, could not put into Miami or Key West unless in distress.

The captain of the St. Louis said before leaving Havana he feared mass suicides or a passenger mutiny if his vessel started back across the Atlantic for Germany.

Meantime, the steamship Orinoco, of the Hamburg-Amerika Line, which also owns the St. Louis, was called back to Cuxhaven, Germany, and approximately 200 Jews who had started to emigrate to Cuba were landed.

Officials called the Orinoco back from Antwerp, Belgium, yesterday after hearing the refugees would not be permitted to land in Cuba. The unhappy throng, most of them friendless in Cuxhaven, were uncertain as to their future. Some were making arrangements to return to their old homes in Germany.

Leahy Mentioned For Head of Navy

explained reason, failed to send the formal nomination to the Senate.

The announcement was made after the President revealed that the Caribbean island was to be transformed into an "American Gibraltar" to protect the Atlantic approach to the Panama Canal.

Mystery surrounded the Presidential maneuver. Last week, when Mr. Roosevelt sent a group of nominations to the Capitol, it was noted that Leahy's name was among them but had been scratched out. This gave rise to reports the President is holding the admiral in reserve for a more important post.

Discounting this is a hitherto unnoticed legal technicality which forbids a retired naval officer from holding office in any civil territory of the United States. Significantly, however, the law does not apply to the Cabinet.

Several Senators said that should Leahy be nominated to the governorship, a measure raising the ban could be enacted easily. It was pointed out that if he went to Puerto Rico he would be available for recall.

The venerable Swanson, who was 77 on March 31, has been in failing health almost since joining the official family in 1933. His recurrent absences began to be felt keenly last fall, it was said, when Mr. Roosevelt set out to build the world's greatest Navy.

Edison Ill Recently

Most of his duties are being performed by Leahy and Assistant Secretary of the Navy Charles A. Edison, who frequently has been mentioned as his successor. Recently, however, Edison's health has been none too good, projecting Leahy farther into the forefront.

The President has collaborated closely with the admiral in laying down his huge naval construction program. In the next two years, when the tremendously complex program reaches its peak, he is said to be desirous of having in his Cabinet a man of Leahy's known ability and qualifications.

Navy Department sources last night professed to have no knowledge of the reports. Two high officials said, however, that Leahy is deemed one of the most competent operations heads ever to have filled the job.

Japanese-Soviet Clash Reported Near Changkufeng

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, June 4.—The newspaper Nichi-Nichi in a dispatch from Seoul, capital of Korea, reported today Russians and Japanese had clashed near Changkufeng, scene of last summer's vestpocket war.

A battle began shortly after noon, the dispatch said, and continued until sundown when the Russians withdrew, leaving six bodies and carrying numerous others.

It asserted the only Japanese casualties were five wounded.

Swift Tide Balks Efforts To Lift Thetis

Toll Raised to 99; More Could Have Been Saved, Diver Holds

By the Associated Press.

Birkenhead, England, June 4.—A fleet of salvage vessels worked doggedly today over the sunken Thetis but with little hope that the treacherous currents of the Irish Sea would give up the submarine and her 99 dead for five or ten days.

While an aroused nation awaited official light on the worst disaster in submarine annals, the toll of dead was revised to 99 when it was disclosed that one man, unlisted heretofore, was aboard the Thetis when she went down on a trial run last Thursday.

He was Donald Vivian Tyler, 42-year-old fitter employed by the Vickers-Armstrong works. His presence on the craft was announced by a brother.

The country's best salvage equipment and 30 expert divers were able to work for only about 40 minutes in the swift sea currents at each tide at the spot where the Thetis lies on an even keel in Liverpool Bay, 130 feet under water.

A high official of the Mersey Dock and Harbor Board, which is directing salvage operations in co-operation with Cammell Laird, Ltd., builders of the Thetis, predicted the new, mysteriously disabled craft could not be brought to the surface for at least five, possibly ten days.

Pointed questions concerning the disaster, arising throughout the Nation and reflected in press comment, brought an admiralty statement that "a full inquiry will be held as soon as practicable."

It was assumed the inquiry before a naval board would be secret, although public inquests over the dead are required.

The attitude of some quarters questioning the efficiency of rescue operations was given support when Chief Diver William McKenzie returned to Liverpool from the scene and expressed the opinion that if divers had arrived 12 to 15 hours earlier he believed virtually all hands could have been saved.

McKenzie, who directed the raising of the scuttled German fleet at Scapa Flow after the World War, said that when he sent the first diver down to the Thetis early Saturday the last tappings were heard from within the submarine.

Newspapers asked "Could these men have been saved?" and "Who was to blame?"

The opening session of Parliament tomorrow was expected to result in more questions from members wanting the admiralty to explain the many mysteries of the disaster and the subsequent rescue work.

The sorrow of the entire nation was reflected at the great shipbuilding center of Birkenhead and Liverpool, where flags flew at half-staff and holiday crowds on the docks spoke in subdued tones.

In village churches, in cathedrals and aboard all warships special prayers were offered. In Birkenhead and Liverpool, where most of the victims lived, prayers were directed for their families.

A few relatives attended the services, but most hid their grief in the privacy of their homes after having spent hours of anxious waiting and hoping since Thursday at the Cammell Laird offices.

hausted by aimless driving in search of a parking space, preferred to risk a "ticket" rather than waste additional time.

Shoppers Not Included

The 18,413 available parking places in the downtown congested area include street spaces, parking lots and garages. This district is bounded on the west by Nineteenth street, on the east by Sixth street, on the north by K street and on the south by Constitution avenue. The 56,000 cars represent District residents and those who live in the so-called "metropolitan area" and daily drive to work. That figure, however, does not include shoppers nor the daily influx of tourists and sightseers.

There are 170,000 autos registered in the District, and officials estimate that 30 per cent of them come downtown during some period every day. To include the "metropolitan area"—outlying sections of Maryland and Virginia—the registration figure is boosted to 200,000.

Of the 120,000 Government workers, an estimated 40 per cent drive cars to and from their offices. And of 34,000 in private business, it is estimated 25 per cent bring their cars downtown.

"Fringe" Space Suggested

The problem of transient parking—where motorists leave their cars on the streets for short periods at a time—has been solved to a large extent by the installation of parking meters, say authorities, and more meters are planned. But officials admit they are no nearer a solution to the long-time (all-day) parking problem than they were when it first became acute several years ago.

The favorite remedy of Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer, Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, highway director, and others is a system of "fringe" parking facilities—lots, garages or special curb spaces in areas just beyond the congested section.

It is out of the question financially, say planners, to acquire land in the downtown area for municipally operated storage places. To construct underground facilities downtown would bring the parking fee too high for the average car owner and it would take many years to absorb the original expense.

Hence, the suggested "fringe" terminals where land prices are cheaper.

Statehood Asked For Puerto Rico By Legislators

San Juan, Puerto Rico, June 4 (AP).—Statehood for Puerto Rico was requested today in a memorandum addressed to President Roosevelt and Congress by a joint committee of the Puerto Rican Legislature.

Pending action on the request, the committee "demanded" island reforms providing for an elective Governor and the transfer to him of appointive powers, now held by the President, for members of the island's Supreme Court and heads of various government departments.

Another provision called for election of two resident commissioners in Washington, one to sit in each house of Congress with the right to vote on all questions affecting Puerto Rico.

Kitchen Floor Full of Ants?

Here's how to get rid of them. First, keep floor, pantry shelves, cupboards, etc., free from food particles, sugar, etc. That's what attracts ants. Second, get a can of Bee Brand Insect Powder. Sprinkle it in corners and along the back edges of shelves, back of and under the sink, refrigerator and stove. Blow it into cracks and crevices, back of and under wall boards. Build powder barriers between the ants' nests and places where they feed. Outside the house, sprinkle Bee Brand Powder around ant holes, wherever they are found. Repeat these treatments regularly, and you'll soon be free of ants.

Bee Brand Insect Powder really kills ants, roaches and other crawling insects quick—yet it's entirely safe to use around the house. Insist on the genuine Bee Brand Insect Powder—in the red and yellow can. It's sold with a guarantee of satisfaction or your money back. Three sizes: 10¢, 25¢, 60¢.

NOTE: You can also kill ants and roaches, as well as flies and mosquitoes, with Bee Brand Insect Spray. Read directions on can.

The Manton Conviction

Addressing the jury at the close of the hearings in the Manton case, Judge Chestnut said: "The charge of conspiracy to sell justice, made against an appellant Federal judge, is hitherto unprecedented in the history of 150 years of the Federal judiciary." The conviction of Martin T. Manton, former senior judge of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, on a charge of selling decisions is, therefore, a shocking incident.

To some, perhaps, the guilt of Judge Manton will seem to justify a loss of confidence in the integrity of the Federal judiciary. Viewed from another angle, however, the outcome of the Manton case should strengthen public faith in the virility of our democratic form of government and the essential soundness of our institutions.

We should have good cause to despair of the future of the country if corruption in high places were concealed or condoned when discovered. By the same token we have every reason to be proud of the courage and resolution of all those official investigators, and prosecutors—as well as public spirited citizens—who have co-operated in bringing Judge Manton to the bar of justice. Aside from the difficulty of challenging a jurist of high rank, the case was extremely complex. It called for intelligence and determination on the part of the prosecutors as well as a high degree of devotion to public duty.

To District Attorney Dewey major credit is due for assembling and making available the evidence of bribery—evidence so scandalous as to bring about Judge Manton's hasty resignation, thereby forestalling impeachment proceedings. Fortunately, the investigation did not end there. It went forward to marshal evidence for the trial now successfully concluded.

Mr. Dewey's campaign against judicial venality, as well as his exposure of New York City's racketeering rings, would have little value if it had not been for an aroused public opinion, aided and abetted by the efforts of public officials to apprehend and punish offenders.

The conviction of Judge Manton, instead of being a cause of head-shaking, therefore, is a reason for feeling renewed confidence in the dependability of the machinery of justice. The importance of the conviction lies in its welcome assurance that exalted judicial office affords no protective covering for corrupt practices.

The Baby Shortage

In New York the other day, Dr. Henry F. Heimholz, president of the American Academy of Pediatrics, reminded that body of the fact that the birth rate in this country is now at the lowest mark in our history. Even the wonderful reduction in infant mortality that has marked the past 30 years no longer compensates for the decrease in births. This is shown strikingly in the fact that there are now some 1,300,000 fewer children enrolled in the schools than there were a decade ago.

A baby shortage is, of course, a matter of professional concern to pediatrists. But it is also a matter with tremendous implications for all of us and most of all for the babies that do get born.

The effect of the decline has already been felt throughout all the elementary grades and it will be increasingly felt in the future. In another four years attendance at high schools will begin to drop. Sooner or later, unless the birth rate is increased or stabilized, part of the vast educational plant into which America has put so heavy an investment will have to close down.

This, however, is merely one facet of the problem. The consequences of the declining birth rate must sooner or later overtake industry. Unless the population is supplemented by immigration, a steadily declining birth rate will mean a steadily shrinking domestic market for many commodities—a formidable prospect in view of the shrinkage of foreign markets that has already followed the rise of closed economies abroad.

Over and above all this we shall have an increasing burden upon the diminishing young of providing for the increasing proportion of elderly folk among the population.

Although various factors have contributed to the decline in births, there is little doubt that the largest single factor is the unwillingness of married couples to accept the lower living standard entailed in the rearing of a large family on a limited or sporadic income.

The difficulty is, therefore, double-edged. If the dangers inherent in a continuing sharp decline of the birth rate are to be averted, it is obvious that physically and mentally sound men and women must recognize a greater responsibility to society in the matter of bearing and rearing children. But it is quite unlikely they will do so unless and until society itself recognizes a greater responsibility to parenthood.

Mostly Constructive

For the most part the Senate Appropriations Committee's revision of the District supply bill is favorable to the local community. As is customary in the Senate, the committee analyzed Washington's needs as the Nation's Capital. With more balanced judgment than was shown by the House, it saw the necessity of effective community service as well as economy.

In raising the proposed Federal contribution from $5,000,000 to $7,750,000, the Senate committee has recognized the close relationship between the inadequacy of the present payment and Washington's antiquated schools and ineffective relief system. The smaller sum has not been sufficient to cover all the items in the local budget incident to the development of a great capital here. So an uncertain amount of local revenue has been diverted from essential community services.

No doubt the committee noted, also, that while the expenses of the District are increasing its taxable area is being gradually diminished by Government land purchases. In these circumstances the committee might well have reported the Overton bill which would bring about automatic adjustment of the Federal payment to the District on the basis of the Government's land holdings here. Presumably the committee did not want to go that far at present. But it has candidly acknowledged the obligation of Congress to increase its allowance to the District when that community's expenses rise and its taxable area is diminished.

The committee also showed good judgment in distributing most of the increases it granted. Jobless men who are capable of work but unable to obtain aid from the WPA have been shamelessly treated in Washington. Because the District has no vote, the House was willing to continue closing its eyes to this situation in spite of the Burdette Lewis survey showing an acute need for more efficient and more adequate relief. If the Senate approves the committee's addition of $600,000 to the relief fund, there will be a strong argument for adoption of the higher figure in conference.

Only a modest beginning toward replacement of obsolete schools would be made under this bill. But it provides for the preparation of plans and acquisition of sites so that this work can move more rapidly in the future. The allowance for 50 additional policemen will be thoroughly approved. And the committee probably did well to delay transfer of the Playground Department to the Board of Education until more comprehensive plans for consolidation of recreational activities can be adopted.

The one serious blunder in the bill as it stands seems to be the slashes in the salaries of Health Officer Ruhland and his assistant, Dr. Daniel L. Seckinger. Chairman Overton, of the sub-committee handling the bill, has no explanation for these cuts and indications are that they were effected by the full committee. Obviously this is an attempt to punish Dr. Ruhland for something. Because of his recent controversy with the medical schools over the control of medical service at Gallinger Hospital, the committee's action will be associated in the public mind with that incident.

To punish Dr. Ruhland for his efforts to retain control of Gallinger by the Health Department, however, would seem to be inexcusable. The committee owes the District an explanation of this punitive measure against efficient public servants. Surely some Senator will demand an explanation when the bill reaches the floor. And if nothing more than pique over a difference of viewpoints is involved in this curious action, the Senate will have no reasonable alternative to voting it down.

Arms And The Worker

In his first report as director of the International Labor Office, John G. Winant discusses briefly but illuminatingly the economic problems of rearmament in relation to labor. In the United States, with unutilized resources and a large labor surplus, outlays for rearmament are sometimes thought to be a blessing in disguise. Not so in those countries where all the labor and materials available are being utilized to provide the goods and services needed to maintain present-day living standards.

The I. L. O. is already concerned about the growing labor shortages in special occupations essential to national defense. Should this situation result in extensive shifts of labor and materials from peacetime activities to preparations for war, the I. L. O.'s efforts to raise living standards will be severely hampered. Indeed, in many countries labor is already suffering from the effects of excessive concentration upon rearmament operations. As Mr. Winant points out, hardships may be alleviated by careful planning to insure economic utilization of the labor force. But beyond a certain point, the pressure of armament demands necessitates curtailment of consumption and restricts investment in industries not producing war materials.

Germany provides an outstanding example of the methods currently employed to curtail consumption and thus release goods and labor for use in producing instruments of destruction. Rigid control of wages, limitations upon dividend payments, increased taxation and rationing of commodities are among the control methods cited. In Japan, France and Great Britain, heavily increased consumption taxes, falling upon the laboring masses, have accomplished the same purpose.

Public spending resorted to as a device for stimulating business activity and hastening recovery, is, as Mr. Winant states, in sharp contrast to armament spending. The former aims to increase mass consumption whereas the latter often has to be accompanied by measures designed to reduce consumption and prevent living standards from rising.

To the extent that economic arguments have any force in these disturbed times, Mr. Winant may be said to have presented a very forceful argument in favor of world peace.

Epilogue

The long agony and slow death of the 99 men trapped within the British submarine Thetis has sent a thrill of horror and pity through two continents. Here in Washington it throws a somber shadow over the preparations for the imminent visit of the King and Queen, whose subjects these men were.

Not the least pitiful element in the whole sad story is the total failure of the British navy's efforts at rescue, contrasting with the brilliant success that so recently attended the rescue of the survivors aboard the Squalus. It is not surprising to read that cinema audiences throughout England sobbed as the news pictures of that rescue were shown. The poignant contrast is no doubt responsible for much of the storm of indignation that has been unleashed in England against the British Admiralty.

But while it is easy to sympathize with the emotions aroused in England, it will be well, in view of the highly technical nature of the problems involved in each instance, for Americans to reserve judgment at least until further facts about the Thetis are brought to light. The circumstances of these two disasters were not identical. Except for the considerable depth at which she lay, the circumstances in the case of the Squalus seem to have favored the rescuers. But the hull of the Thetis was at a sharp angle and it is not certain that so massive an object as a rescue chamber could have been attached to her hatch.

But even assuming that some of those who died in the Thetis could have been saved had such a mechanism been available, we must remember that until the Squalus disaster the American apparatus had not been tested in any actual rescue operation. Moreover, the shallower water in which the Thetis was favored the chances of escape by means of the Davis "lung." Four men did escape and three perished in the attempt. The mystery is why apparently no others tried this means of reaching the surface. Some light may be thrown on the matter by the surmise made here yesterday that the presence of lethal gases caused the masks to be donned prematurely and the oxygen in the portable tanks to be thus exhausted.

In any event the presence of so many untrained civilians must have immensely complicated the problem of discipline.

Thus there is at least one question to which the British public can in all justice demand a full and satisfactory answer. The list of passengers on the Thetis has increased with successive dispatches and the total of persons aboard stands at 103, only a little less than double the number aboard the Squalus. Obviously every one of these persons, over the number actually needed to man and test the vessel, put an unnecessary drain on the reserves of air. The chances of rescue, in which time is so vital a factor, were thereby diminished in direct ratio. Why were all these civilians permitted to make that fatal test cruise?

A New Yorker was robbed of $250 in a revolving door. One can't be too careful in choosing the persons one goes around with.

Spotless

W. K. Kelsey in the Detroit News

From England comes a delightful story told by John Masefield, the poet laureate, and it seems the event took place in this country. Somewhere the third folio version of "Hamlet" was produced; it contains lines not found in the first and second quarto versions. A "literary man" who witnessed the production remarked to a friend: "You said it was the complete version of 'Hamlet,' yet I have been listening the whole evening and they never said, 'Out, damned spot!'"

The friend related the matter to a girl student, who passed it on to her professor of literature. The professor's comment was: "All my life I have belonged to the Purer Shakespeare Society, and I am indeed thankful to find that, at the end of my long life, I have not worked in vain, and that some of the wanton blemishes in the works of that great poet have been removed."

From these instances the poet laureate concluded that there are scholars who don't read Shakespeare.

Constructive Taxes

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mark Sullivan in his Post column of May 16, "Dodging Tax Revision," credits the President with saying there is no such thing as a "deterrent tax"—that no one tax is more deterrent than any other.

That there can be no tax upon wealth without deterrent effect upon its production is quite true, but to put all such levies on a par in that respect is to ignore the variance in rates and many all too familiar facts in our tax history. Some years ago a friend and many others suffered total loss of investments in an oleomargarine factory through a Federal tax at the behest of dairy interests. That is but one of many instances of taxation not only deterrent but killing, as was the intention.

Moreover, such statements ignore the existence and possibilities of a tax that, so far from being a deterrent to industrial production, is a direct stimulus thereto in proportion to rate.

That is the so-called tax on land values, which is in reality not a tax but involves collection of an indebtedness of the individual to society, as land values are not a product of labor but arise from community needs and activities. The selling price of land, barring inflation, marks the extent to which this indebtedness remains uncollected and is in fact a gift of society to the land owner, who as such is not a producer but a burden upon production of more deterrent effect than taxes upon the wealth produced.

Universal Peace

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: From the time when the early discoverers first set foot on the mainland of the New World, 1497-1498, until the Continental Congress met in Philadelphia, 1774, constituted an epoch replete with social, economic and religious evolution.

The revolutionary years that began with the writitng of the Declaration of Independence, 1776, and ending at the adoption of the Constitution, 1787, marked the birth of the United States of America.

Hampered by English and French sympathies, political differences and foreign interference, the young republic was soon to learn the necessity of national feeling and a centralized government.

A second war with England, 1812-1814, brought about by illegal acts against American merchantmen, resulted in our greater independence of Europe, the growing need for manufacturing and commerce and a strong foreign policy that culminated in the Monroe Doctrine, 1823.

Two questions—the protective tariff, favorable to the North, where the Union was held supreme, and slavery, inseparably interwoven with the South, where the States claimed sovereign rights—defied all amicable solution.

In 1917 the United States was compelled to enter the World War as a belligerent, and with the combined moral, physical and financial support of 115,000,000 people threw her every energy into the conflict and, after 19 months, the enemy, realizing defeat inevitable, asked for an armistice, and on November 11, 1918, the protocol was signed, ending the hostilities.

Since then to the present the United States has done everything possible for the promotion of good will among the nations, and is ever ready to meet on common ground former friend and foe and there to make a lasting covenant for universal peace.

The Smith Hearings

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your recent editorial entitled "Futile Hearing" merits commendation. It was marked by accuracy as well as restraint in its analysis of the hearing granted, under compulsion, to Dr. Carrie Weaver Smith before the same tribunal that sanctioned her condemnation and dismissal nearly two years ago. "Futile" is a mild word for the trial of a person "before," as you state it, "a body that long ago made up its mind."

An equally apt editorial might be written on the conduct of the present hearing. Certain important former staff members who supported Dr. Smith at the Training School are not now available, while against her are summoned most of those who are dependent on the present school regime for their jobs and livelihood. Their carefully prepared testimony is skillfully handled by the official legal office that serves the District government—the Commissioners who are acting as judges. An objective observer might well ask if this so-called hearing is not a case of plaintiffs being permitted to try a defendant.

The hearing is made more striking by the fact that the defendant is unable to employ legal counsel and that before the hearing she had no access to vital records in the hands of the lawyers for the other side. Following the fourth day's parade of witnesses drawn from the present school regime, a spectator remarked, "They've summoned everything but the kitchen stove!" They've also allowed admittedly hearsay testimony to stand. The most flagrant instance is the repeated "I was informed" testimony of a District auditor on matters outside his field as an auditor.

They have gone so far as to uphold the refusal of a witness to answer a highly relevant question when the answer would have scored a point for the defendant, while allowing the next witness to answer a similar question when the answer favored the prosecution. Despite serious and unfair handicaps, Dr. Smith has so far conducted herself and her case with fairness, good humor and intelligence. This at least should be known.

The Unemployment Compensation Bill

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Citizens who care at all about the type of government under which they live and whose civic consciousness has not been dulled by lack of a vote in the District of Columbia should be aroused by what is happening to the unemployment compensation law in the District.

The first and most important crime against the people of the District of Columbia is the manner in which the hearings have been conducted. The hearings have had three outstanding features.

The first is the way in which they have been announced. Typical of this is that Congressman McGehee states to the press that there will be hearings on a small-loans bill. When the hearings open, however, they take place on the unemployment compensation bill. Then Mr. McGehee says, "We announced hearings."

The second is that people who requested to be heard in favor of the Randolph unemployment compensation bill as against the McGehee bill were not called. When this type of policy becomes a practice then a heavy blow is being delivered at our American institutions.

The District Unemployment Compensation Board is accumulating vast funds for several reasons. The most important reason is that at every single twist and turn the board has drafted restrictive administrative procedure so as to reduce to a minimum the number of people getting benefits, the amount of benefits which they get, and the period over which they get them. There is sufficient evidence to prove that even under the present law the outgo could be increased significantly and materially under an administration which believed in the purposes for which the law was set up.

Unemployment in the District of Columbia is as high as ever. Well over 9,000 people are not only unemployed but in dire need of relief, having been certified for the WPA. Thousands of these under a liberalized statute could be eligible for more employment benefits over a longer period of time. Thousands of others, such as domestic servants, taken care of at present in no way, could receive assistance through a revision of the unemployment compensation law.

There is no sense in accumulating millions of dollars in reserve, but there is even less sense and much less humanity in shutting one's eyes to the dire need of the unemployed who should be getting more unemployment compensation benefits.

Full and free public hearings would involve a lot of interesting facts. Is that the reason that citizens of the District of Columbia were denied such a hearing? Can it be that there are some who fear a comparison between the way the District Unemployment Compensation Board has done its job and the way it has been done in other jurisdictions? The McGehee bill, though it is now on the calendar, should be sent back so that both sides may be heard.

SIDNEY R. KATZ.
Washington, June 2.

Surprise Technique

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: While Winston Churchill is so keen an analyst of world affairs that we must listen when he says the big show-down is due sometime this year, there is something else we need to take note of. And that is that these modern dictators struggle, not only along the conventional lines of armed forces, but along new, unpredictable lines.

In fact, the unpredictable appeals most strongly to these dictators, whose chief tactic is surprise. We are surprised at the suddenness of their seizures of territory, surprised at their pogroms, surprised at their terrorism and sabotage, surprised at their "will power"—their will to stoop to surprisingly low levels of behavior in order to find some advantage against their more honorable ("stupid," they call it) opponents.

Now the organizing of sabotage and terrorism is, like the organizing of an army, a thing requiring time. And since it has really barely begun, we may be sure that as time passes the organizing of this sabotage and terrorism will come to be more and more a major factor in the struggle. Can we assume, then, that time works for the democracies? I think not. It would work for the democracies, if only they pressed their advantages as energetically as the dictatorships do. But the easy-going methods of the democracies (and above all, their naive faith-without-works in the victory of democracy), gives the dictatorships their grand opportunity.

The Post Impressionist

The Little Gray Man

The little gray man with the long white beard who infests my house is not, strictly speaking, one of the Brooklyn Boys. He is, probably, merely an ex-apprentice of that hideous sodality who was flunked out after a short trial through failure to show stern enough stuff.

For he is not brutal, ruthless and foolhardy as is a true bowman of the Brooklyn gang. Furthermore, he is gray, not green. He is merely malicious, so cowardly as never to show himself, and his humor is of the whimsy, rather than the belly-laugh, variety.

As any luckless victim of the bona fide Brooklyn Boys can testify, that horrible green-garbed, arrow-shooting clan, led by their leering leader with a drawn sword, have no compunctions about showing themselves. Usually they appear at night, herding their troops of pink elephants up and down the ceiling, kicking their heels on the headboard of the bed, swarming over the transom, cursing, shooting and sic-ing their snakes out from dark corners.

They beat on the heads of their victims with clubs the nightlong through; often they stuff barroom floor scrapings in his mouth.

Compared to these, my man is a poor specimen indeed, hiding from human view, wreaking depredations of a lesser, almost unwholesomely puny character.

His worst trait is his diet, which is exclusively white handkerchiefs, collar buttons and matches on the living room tables. These he consumes in wholesale quantities. Concerning the matches, a calm philosophy is the only guarantee of retaining sanity. One must accept as inevitable that no matter how often the boxes are filled and placed conveniently near the cigarettes, next day they will be empty, the useless boxes still in place, luringly deceptive.

Nothing much can be done about the handerchiefs, either. Where or when the little gray man eats them, no one knows. It is simply a fact that every month or so another half dozen must be bought to bring the depleted supply in the drawer back to adequacy.

Sometimes he eats the collar buttons outright, and sometimes he hides them, against a rainy, hungrier day. He also hides the clothes brush, the shoe horn, the nail files and last year's swimming suit.

The little man's most spectacular accomplishment, however, is uncanny clairvoyance. Days ahead of time, apparently, he knows what phonograph record I will want to play. With unfailing accuracy he places it at the bottom of the pile. Sometimes, in an attempt to outguess him, I start the search at the bottom. In these cases the desired record has been left at the top. You can't win.

A cousin of my little man actually lives inside the phonograph of a neighbor. It is one of those complicated machines, automatically placing one record after another on the turntable, playing both sides or neither on command, blaring out only the oboe or the triangle according to instructions, preserving the soft sound of the Toscanini mopping his brow, inserting or deleting Bing Crosby's adenoids and generally being mother's little helper around the house from dawn till dusk.

That is, it would if it weren't for the little man. With an almost neurotic demand for perfection, he insists that each button be pushed at the right time, each knob turned properly and each gear shifted correctly. If a single error has been made, he takes it as a special invitation come out and raise hell. Iron claws make unexpected motions, shrieks and screams come from the amplifier, the needle gouges into the woodwork and the machine is transformed from its usually placid Percheron self into a plunging, bucking, unbroken cayuse at the rodeo, with the little grey man in the saddle, fanning and spurring it into frenzied contortions.

On such occasions the mistress of the house collapses into a weeping bundle of nerves, screaming for her husband only a moment before unconsciousness mercifully blots out the terror. Howling oaths and threats at the little man, the master comes running and throws switches frantically until things are brought back under control. The little man slinks back into his cubbyhole, muttering a couple of hoarse cries before he subsides.

Recently, however, even perfection got on the little man's nerves. Fully a week had gone by without a wrong button being pushed. Bored and resentful, the little man attacked even though the machine had been set according to the rules. Striking without warning, he let out a blood-curdling howl, shot out half the metallic equipment of the machine, and falling onto a stack of records, picked one up after the other, brandished it above his head, crashed it down on the turntable, hurled it across the cabinet and then wildly chewed the broken bits to a pulp, which he spewed throughout the works.

A mechanic, hastily routed out to repair the damage, sized up the situation at a glance. "Little man trouble, eh?" he said.

No known method of extermination or fumigation to get rid of the little men has ever been devised. There is a report that a hermit, living naked and without possessions on the Lybian Desert, was free of little men for a period of three or four days, but the rumor has never been confirmed.

An Uplift In Spirits

By Ernest K. Lindley

Turning Point Seen

AN IMPROVEMENT in the political standing of the Roosevelt Administration can be sensed in Washington. It is felt among the men around the President, who are all in higher spirits than they were a month ago. It evidently is felt also among the Republicans and conservative Democrats. The Gallup Poll, showing a rise of 2 per cent in the President's popularity over a month ago, indicates that the trend is not confined to Washington—which, like Wall Street, feeds on its own emotions and is therefore an index which usually is oversensitive and often is wrong.

The change in atmosphere may be due partly to the signs that business is beginning to pick up again. The brisk spring recovery which was forecast by most of the Administration economists failed to materialize. Most of them place the blame on the European crisis, and most of them are optimistic about the outlook for the second half of the year. But, having misplaced their faith once this year, they are holding their optimism within narrow bounds. Nevertheless, a turning point seems to have arrived, which is enough to make everybody feel a little better.

Opposition Lines In Congress Crumble

THE QUIETING of the European crisis may also have worked to Mr. Roosevelt's advantage by allaying the anxieties about his foreign policy which are felt by many of the supporters of his domestic program.

A third factor favoring the Roosevelt Administration has been the crumbling of the lines of the opposition in Congress. After five months it has become plain enough that the opposition had no program except "economy." The economy bloc is thoroughly demoralized, as a result of the great unbudgeted increase in the appropriation for farm benefits, the vote on the Townsend Plan, and the treatment of various lesser items of appropriation. Congress may trim the WPA appropriation for next year. There is still a powerful anti-WPA bloc, but so many of its members have voted for, or have failed to oppose, the increased farm benefits that it cannot successfully pose as an "economy bloc."

Approximately one-third of the Republican membership of the House voted for the Townsend old age pension plan—as did approximately one-sixth of the Democratic membership. The Republican vote was smaller than most observers had expected, but large enough to handicap the efforts of the Republican National Committee to present the G. O. P. to the nation as the party of sound finance.

Solid Foundation For Recovery Needed

INSOFAR AS the higher spirits in the Roosevelt Administration arise from the prospects of economic recovery they are justified—provided, of course, that the recovery continues until the 1940 election. (This is a big proviso.) Insofar as they are based on the demoralization of the opposition in Congress they seem to me to lack a solid foundation. The opposition may lack a program, but that does not mean that the Roosevelt Administration has one. Unquestionably there is a strong feeling among Mr. Roosevelt's supporters that the time has passed for improvisation, and arrived for the drawing up of a comprehensive program which will show where he wants to go during the next few years.

I quote from a letter, one of many expressing similar ideas which I recently have received from Roosevelt supporters:

"I am concerned with making the New Deal more than a temporary expedient for dealing with depression and administering belatedly instituted agencies such as Social Security. I gather that in the early years of the New Deal even the file clerks thought they were doing something worth while, but that there is not today much enthusiasm among government workers. So far as they know, the New Deal is now dealt, and their job is the routine function of running the new machinery with the old—There appears now to be less enthusiasm than in a Tory Government determined to get back to normalcy.

Ten-Year Program Is Recommended

"TO GET OUTSIDE the bureaucratic atmosphere of Washington, the New Deal still fails to inspire much enthusiasm, though what it has done is widely viewed as good or accepted as inevitable.

"What is needed now is a 10-year program of long-term objectives that may never be achieved but can be worked for . . . a program of housing, medical care, and re-employment. . . . It is the lack of these long-time aims which permits the opposition to charge Roosevelt, as Hacker and Kendrick charged Wilson, with diverting American attention from the home scene to foreign war."

The men around Roosevelt are feeling more optimistic, but they seem to me to lack the sense of confidence which comes from knowing, if not where you are going, at least where you are trying to go.

Demobilization Set For 420,000 by Franco for June 16

Madrid, June 4 (AP).—New government orders today set June 16 for commencing demobilization of 420,000 soldiers of Gen. Franco's army of 1,000,000.

Trains and other forms of transport are thronged with home-going soldiers and sailors preparing to leave the victorious forces.

Officials, however, are keeping careful records of all demobilized men in order to assure rapid remobilization should a national emergency arise.

Books And Things

By Lewis Gannett

Publications Of 1939

WHEN YOU come to summing up the books of 1939, you begin with John Steinbeck's "Grapes of Wrath," and then you take a long breath and wonder which of a dozen other books to set down next. For "Grapes of Wrath" has the quality of greatness: to read it is an emotional experience.

Burton Rascoe says it isn't so. He wrote a long dissenting opinion in "News Week," alleging that Steinbeck's language was not that which he, Rascoe, heard as a youth in Oklahoma, and that the region of the Crazy Horse Mountains, north of the Arkansas River, where a careful study of the road maps seems to place the old Joad farm, is not, properly speaking, a part of the Dust Bowl. He had other objections to the story, which might have been boiled down into four words; "I don't like it." There are no words in the critical vocabulary for which I have more respect; they go deeper than any of the formulations of criticism. By his likes and dislikes, not by the pattern of words in which he expresses them, the critic is ultimately judged.

I do like "Grapes of Wrath," and I could concede more faults than a dozen Rascoes could find in it, and still feel that the book towers above the other novels of the year. If you are shockable, some of the language will shock you; all I can reply to that is that I've heard it. It rings true. I, too, have listened to truck drivers in hamburger joints; and my impression is that Steinbeck's version of their conversation offers but a faint and delicate suggestion of its physiological bouquet. I think that suggestion was an essential part of Steinbeck's writing job. Steinbeck has as good an ear for the rhythm of rough American speech as Hemingway, Cain, Caldwell or Weidman; the quality which distinguishes him from most other "tough" writers is that he is not afraid also to be tender. He knows how closely toughness and tenderness live together. Call it "sentimentality" if you like; it is life. In Steinbeck's case it is also literature.

Some have criticized the ending of the story. It is too sudden, they say, too deliberately startling. Possibly so. You will find the same kind of violent endings to most even of John Steinbeck's short stories. There is a kind of violence in the man's nature, in his outlook upon this world. It is a part of his indignation that a world he loves so much is—as it is.

"But the book is propaganda," others say. So, I suppose, were Dostoivsky's novels, and Tolstoy's, and most of Dickens's. So, in some sense, are most books that live. Propaganda for humanity.

At any rate, "Grapes of Wrath" stands at the top of my list of the books of 1938, and for me there is no other in its class. But there are a host of good novels.

THERE IS John Marquand's "Wickford Point," urbane and witty as was to be expected from the author of "The Late John Apley," though I think, a more sprawling and less integrated book, lacking a clearly defined perspective.

Dorothy Canfield's "Seasoned Timber" lingers in my mind as do few of the year's novels. Perhaps it is not, technically, a very good novel. Dorothy Canfield weakened it by combining in one book a not very perspicacious story of a middle-aged man's love for a young girl with her brilliant picture of a Vermont community faced with a local issue of democracy vs. money, of anti-Semitism in a most smilingly innocent-looking form. More persuasively though less dramatically than "It Can't Happen Here," it presents the basic issue of American democracy.

I'd like to know whether most American communities, in Vermont or elsewhere, would face that issue as honestly, as does "Clifford, Vermont," in Dorothy Canfield's novel. It may be significant of something that no single Vermont newspaper ventured dissent from her findings. Dissent there must have been, even in rock-ribbed Vermont—though I understand that when, before the book was published, Miss Canfield read the crucial chapter to an academic community in Vermont and called for a vote, only two hands were raised in opposition to Timothy Hulme's stern program. One, I was told, belonged to the English wife of a local manufacturer; the other to her house guest from New York.

"You keep thinking about it," one reader said of "Seasoned Timber." When all the criticism of form, structure and detail is forgotten, that is the criterion by which a book's permanence is determined; that people "keep thinking about it."

"GRAPES OF WRATH," "Wickford Point" and "Seasoned Timber" were all on last Sunday's best-seller chart of "What America Is Reading." So were Pearl Buck's "The Patriot." Paul Wellman's "Jubal Troop" and Margery Sharp's amusing "Harlequin House," which for me, too, belong among the best of the season. But on that best-seller list I miss Elizabeth Bowen's "Death of a Heart," one of the best written books of the year; Archie Binns' story of the Forty-niners, "The Land Is Bright;" Katharine Anne Porter's "Pale Horse, Pale Rider," and Don Marquis' last story, which must be his own Illinois boyhood, "Sons of the Puritan."

I think his publishers did Don Marquis a disservice in their too great loyalty to his text. He had finished, when he died, one section of what was to have been a stout book, and barely more than a chapter of the second section. As printed, the book is obviously unfinished, and leaves the reader vaguely dissatisfied. But that first section, which could well stand by itself, is one of the finest small-town stories in American literature. It is no exaggeration to say that parts of it recall Mark Twain.

AS "GRAPES OF WRATH" justly heads the best-seller lists in fiction, so Nora Waln's "Reaching for the Stars" properly leads in non-fiction. It is the friendliest and most damning picture of contemporary Germany which has reached us—the more convincing because of Miss Wain's obviously genuine affection for the land that Hitler's men have poisoned . . . Oswald Garrison Villard's "Fighting Years," William Lyon Phelps' "Autobiography With Letters," and Edna Ferber's "A Peculiar Treasure" offer very different autobiographical sidelights upon the recent American past. Ruth McKenney's "Industrial Valley" prints one aspect of the present . . . The Beards' "Midpassage" is an enormous canvas that tries to take it all in . . . Bertram Wolfe's "Diego Rivera" is the most colorful of the year's biographies . . . The six volumes of "The Letters of Ralph Waldo Emerson" are a gold mine for those with time to mine in them . . . "The Letters of T. E. Lawrence" yield a different brand of nuggets . . . And, if you cannot come to New York to see the play, Robert Sherwood's "Abraham Lincoln in Illinois" is rarely readable.

Hoover Sees Peril To Democracy in Coercing Citizens

Harrogate, Tenn., June 4 (AP).—Herbert Hoover today said the gravest danger to American democracy lies in Government coercion to force co-operation from the people.

Systems of compulsory co-operation, he said, stifle individual liberties, destroy representative self-government and lead eventually to dictatorships.

The former President spoke at commencement exercises at Lincoln Memorial University, a small mountain school, near historic Cumberland Gap, dedicated to the memory of the Civil War President.

Hoover told the 51 members of the graduation class, "If we have complete security, we shall do it at the cost of all liberty. We must have risk and adventure if we make progress."

Washington Note

The latest tale from Washington is that of the President's reply to a committee of business leaders who urged him to take a little advice from industrialists, ease up on his critics, modify the spending program and say something encouraging to industry once in a while. "I can't do that," he replied. "It would be gambling."

The Office Skeptic says he assumes that if Tom Pendergast had done twice as much as he was accused of he would probably have been sentenced to an extra ten days.

The man who had just come back from the retailers convention in Washington was telling with some enthusiasm about President Roosevelt's speech. "It was good stuff," he declared. "I know," said his listener, "but I could have got it for you wholesale."

South African Manganese

By Eric Rosenthal

An Important New War Industry

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Johannesburg.

WITHIN the bounds of the British Empire a new key industry of world-wide importance has come into being.

Ranking potentially with the famous nickel producers of Canada as a source of vital war material the manganese mines, which have of late been developed in South Africa, are patronized by armament makers, as well as by the peaceful factories of all continents.

But their full worth is known as yet by only a comparatively few specialists.

Ten years ago the Union of South Africa produced $4,505 worth of manganese. Last year the figure was 608,000 tons, worth not far from $3,000,000. For 1939 the total will probably be doubled.

The United States lacks manganese, and is buying from South Africa for her emergency stockpiles. It is likely to become the subject of barter negotiations.

Only India and the Gold Coast among the countries of the British Empire have appreciable outputs of manganese. The former is still somewhat ahead of South Africa, but already it is being rapidly caught up, while the Gold Coast has definitely been surpassed. Today South Africa's major competitor is Soviet Russia, yet so vast are the reserves below the equator that to outstrip the Bolsheviks is chiefly a question of putting in additional plants to cope with the demand.

WHY THEN is manganese so important to the world? Practically every sheet of armor plate and piece of artillery used today involves the use of manganese in some stage of its manufacture. Ever since that great veteran ironmaster, Sir Robert Hatfield, of Sheffield, in 1883 invented the first manganese steel alloy, uses have been growing almost daily.

During the Great War, for instance, every one of the tens of millions of steel helmets worn by the soldiers in the trenches contained this mineral, and it is significant that "Manganese for National Defense" is the title of a special report of the Committee of Industrial Preparedness issued in the United States. About a year ago another report came out under official auspices in Washington on "Strategic Reserves" of those minerals which America herself does not produce in commercial quantities. Among these manganese took one of the highest places. More important still, South Africa was indicated as the country which for accessibility and largeness of resources stood almost unequaled at the present day.

Germany is today buying the metal from South Africa at the rate of hundreds of thousands of tons yearly, and has been doing so ever since the Union became a producer of importance. Other totalitarian states, including particularly Japan, are no less anxious to benefit from this source of supply (while they are permitted to do so).

POSTMASBURG, a little settlement not far from the diamond City of Kimberley in the north of the Cape of Good Hope Province, is the home of the African manganese. Here it was that prospectors disclosed square miles of the manganese-bearing geological formation in 1922. Previously efforts had been made outside Capetown (in the wine district of the Western Cape Province), but the fields proved to be unpayable.

So the Union government, as owner of the state railway system, exhibited an attitude of caution when, in 1928, they were approached by a group of capitalists with the request for the construction of a branch line of 48 miles to reach Postmasburg, 120 miles northwest of Kimberley. The desolate plateau country, over 4,000 feet above sea-level, on the edge of the Kalahari Desert, had no promise of other payable traffic, and the treasury insisted that the interest on the cost of the railway should be guaranteed by the investors.

More than $1,500,000 was spent on the line, which was first opened for a distance of 48 miles in November, 1930, and was six years later prolonged for another 27 miles to Hohtola.

An interesting feature of the developments of the manganese industry is the fact that there has been nothing haphazard about its progress. The whole scheme was planned on a large scale from the beginning. This is also illustrated by the erection of a big mechanical loading plant at Durban, the Indian Ocean port of shipment, 739 miles from the fields.

TODAY a group of companies is operating around the little village of Postmasburg, which boasts of about 2,000 inhabitants, half of whom are white.

Not only South African but Swiss capital has been invested, and the total investments today run into millions.

Some idea of the size of the fields may be gained from the fact that one section of it, Gamagara Ridge, is 40 miles long.

Despite its newness, however, the industry has experienced a number of ups and downs. Within a period of 12 months, from 1929-1930 the value of the production grew one hundredfold (from $4,565 to $459,000), and this soared in 1931 to $639,000. But a collapse of the market set in and the 1932 output was only one-twentieth as big—$32,000, since then there has been a steady rise which has more or less kept pace with rearmament overseas. The 1938 sales were 608,000 tons, worth around $3,000,000.

At Durban huge dumping stacks have been erected for storage purposes, capable of holding 50,000 tons of ore at a time, and the plant of one company can load 3,000 tons a day, or more than 1,000,000 tons a year.

From the official reports one finds that purchasers include the United States, Great Britain, Germany, Belgium, Holland, Canada, France and until lately, Czecho-Slovakia.

Apart from sales to overseas countries, South Africa herself is developing uses for her manganese reserves. Not only are the big steel works at Pretoria, which were erected with government assistance, taking substantial quantities, but an older blast furnace plant in Natal, which has stood unused for years, is now turning out ferro-manganese alloy, an alloy which can be exported.

Bookbinders Hit Repair Work by Lorton Convicts

Authorization of a $10,000 expenditure for binding public library books at Lorton Reformatory, contained in the Senate Appropriations Committee's District budget, yesterday was attacked as "wasteful and unfair" in a statement issued by Local No. 4 of the International Brotherhood of Bookbinders.

"There are hundreds of law-abiding bookbinders unemployed in Washington," declared Ernest R. Eggeling, president of the local, "and they should get some of this work."

A large number of books bound at Lorton last year had to be returned because of inefficiency of the labor, he said, "and there is a real danger of diseased prisoners passing along infection through the books."

Marriner Eccleses Give Sunday Tea

Mr. and Mrs. Corcoran Thom, Jr., Also Entertain; Junior League Horse Show Draws Large Crowd

Yesterday was a typical Washington Sunday, with entertainment both indoors and out for members of Capital society. There were luncheons, several teas, large and small, and the final events of the Junior League Horse Show which opened on Friday out at Meadowbrook.

One of the largest teas given was that held by the Governor of the Federal Reserve Board and Mrs. Marriner Eccles in honor of Mr. and Mrs. George S. Eccles and Mr. and Mrs. Spencer S. Eccles. The party took place in the west ballroom of the Shoreham and was attended by members of residential and official society.

A smaller tea was that given by Mr. and Mrs. Corcoran Thom, jr., in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Smith, whose wedding took place last month. Mrs. Smith is the former Miss Kathleen Knox, daughter of Mrs. McCook Knox, of Washington. The couple are making their home in New York after a honeymoon in the Virginia mountains and came to the Capital just for the week-end. Another party was the large tea at which Dr. and Mrs. George Barnett Trible were hosts.

Norwood, the home of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Wilkins on the Rockville pike, was the scene of a large luncheon when their daughter, Mrs. John Newbold, and Mr. Newbold entertained for some of the younger married group. Swimming and bridge were the order of the afternoon.

The Junior League horse show, which got off to a discouraging start owing to bad weather, drew the largest crowd yesterday since it began. Most of the boxes were filled, and members of Capital society were to be found even in the bleachers. League members, in their green smocks, sold hot dogs and pop, and it was a great day especially for the children, who arrived in droves accompanied by their parents or nurses.

Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., who'd walk a mile to see a horse show, was present and was glimpsed chatting with Mrs. John Hay Whitney. She had several entries in the show and rode some of them herself.

Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, jr., drew a round of applause when she appeared in the costume class, riding her famous horse, "John the Baptist," and wearing an Indian costume, with her long yellow hair flying in pigtails. Later she changed her clothes, donning a plaid jacket of exactly the same material and design as that worn by her husband. Mrs. Robert also sported a cigarette case to match her coat.

The chairman of the Horse Show, Mrs. Montgomery Blair, who has faithfully attended every afternoon, was accompanied yesterday by Dr. Blair and by her aunt, Viscountess de Beughem of Brussels, who is visiting Miss Yolande de Mauduit. Miss de Mauduit was also among the spectators.

Sunning themselves in "bleacher seats" were Mrs. McCeney Werlich, Mrs. Chotard Eustis and a group of other horse-loving Washingtonians. Millard West perched on the rail to watch the events.

The Charge d'Affaires of the German Embassy and Frau Thomsen and the Naval Attache and Frau Witthoeft-Emden occupied one of the boxes. Frau Thomsen wore a purple ensemble, with a flower turban to match, and Frau Witthoeft was all in white.

One of the smartest outfits seen was that worn by Mrs. Pearsons Rust who wa in a blue and white polka dotted print with a white turban trimmed with a navy blue veil. H. L. Rust, jr., was accompanied by his daughter, Miss Jane Rust, a debutante of the past season. Count de Gramont of the French Embassy and the Marquis of Sant'Orsola, Italian Naval Attache, were some of the diplomats glimpsed wandering about.

Miss Margaret Cotter gave the crowd a thrill when she won the skyscraper jump over all the men competing in this thrilling class. Her horse cleared the bars at 6 feet 3 inches.

Miss Cecil Lester Jones, league president, was accompanied by a beau, and others in the company were Harry Semmes, Fritz Lee, treasurer of the show; John Gallicher, who chatted with Thacher Winslow while Mrs. Winslow sold cigarettes; Miss Francesca McKenney wearing an India print and escorted by James Marsh, and Mrs. R. M. Kauffmann, who occupied a box with Mrs. Levi Cooke.

Miss Ettinger Wed at Miami

The wedding of Miss Miriam Ettinger, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Max Ettinger, of Toledo, Ohio, to Melvin Miller Pellman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Barney Pellman, of this city, took place at 5:30 yesterday afternoon at the Roney-Plaza Garden, Miami Beach, Fla., Rabbi Max Shapiro officiating.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a Lanvin model of white lace over a satin slip, with leg o'mutton sleeves and a long train. She carried Killarney roses and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Milton J. Grosse served as matron of honor, wearing a Lanvin frock of peach lace and a hat and carrying McFarlin roses. The bridesmaids, the Misses Beatrice and Charlotte Ettinger, were attired in cornflower blue lace with matching hats and carried Johanna Hill roses. Little Jaqueline Golden, the train bearer, wore a frock in shades of pink and blue, made over taffeta and with a hoop skirt.

Leon Ettinger was best man, and the ushers were Herbert Horowitz Milton Feller and Harold Levitan.

A reception in the Roney Plaza Garden followed the ceremony. Miss Lois Ney Miller assisted. After a tour of the United States, the couple will reside in the Ann Manor Apartments, Toledo.

The bride attended Gulf Park College, Gulfport, Miss., Frances Shimer Junior College, Mount Carroll, Ill., and the University of Miami. Mr. Pellman studied at George Washington University and the University of Miami.

Browns Help Boys' Camp

Maj. and Mrs. Ernest W. Brown were hosts yesterday afternoon at their home, 1554 Hemlock street, at a linen shower for Camp Ernest W. Brown of the Metropolitan Police Boys Club, sponsored by the house and camp committee of which Mrs. Brown is chairman. It was the first the committee had ever given and netted more than 500 sheets, pillow cases and towels as well as cash contribution for the summer camp.

The 500 guests were received by the hostess, the new president of the woman's auxiliary to the club, Miss Elizabeth Howry, and Mrs. James A. Councilor, chairman of the party. From the living room they went into the garden where roses predmoniated among the profusion of summer flowers in bloom. In the background was the rock garden, with its pool and fountain. The punch table was set in the garden beneath a canopy and, in the dining room tea and coffee was served.

The Police Boys Club Band played and several of the members in their red uniforms also assisted in ushering the guests into the garden. Other music included groups of songs by Miss Cathreen Carrico and Howard Samsel.

Alternating at the tea table were Mrs. James Colliflower, Mrs. John A. Remon, Mrs. Leon Arnold, Mrs. Robert McClure, Mrs. Albert Fisher, Mrs. Harry B. Dell, Mrs. Evan Sholl, Mrs. Charles T. Bassett and Mrs. William Shelton.

Those assisting in the garden were Mrs. Casper Dugin, chairman of the refreshments committee; Mrs. G. E. Davis, Mrs. William Harrison, Mrs. W. E. Holmes, Mrs. W. B. Wender, Mrs. W. E. Williams, Mrs. C. H. Stratton, Mrs. B. W. Thompson, Mrs. Charles Talbert and Mrs. Maurice Collins.

The donations were in charge of Mrs. J. M. Schaffer, chairman; Mrs. Sidney Marks, Mrs. G. S. Fracer and Mrs. F. G. Settee. Mrs. E. Milburn Colvin arranged the music.

Capt. Hepburn And Wife to See Miss Howard Wed

Capt. and Mrs. Norman C. Hepburn are en route to London on the Normandie to attend the marriage of Miss Virginia Lee Howard, daughter of the Assistant Treasury Attache of the United States Embassy, Charles Raymond Howard, and Mrs. Howard, to James Terrence Geddes Milne, elder son of Sir James Milne and Lady Milne, of Meldawn, Waldingham, Surrey. The ceremony will take place on Saturday at 2 o'clock at St. George's Church, Hanover Square.

Mary Burgess To Wed Saturday

Miss Mary Eleanor Burgess has completed plans for her wedding on Saturday at 3:30 to William rAthur Bresnahan. The ceremony will take place at St. Paul's Catholic Church, with the Rev. J. F. Burns officiating and will be followed by a reception at the bride's home.

Mrs. M. D. Brooks, sister of Miss Burgess, will be matron of honor, and the bridesmaids are the Misses Marilyn Thompson and Florence Bresnahan. Harry Bresnahan will be best man for his brother. Ushers will be Michael Brooks, Joseph and John Bresnahan, and Edmund Burgess.

The couple will make their home at 300 Clark street, Woodmoor, Md.

Mrs. Ord Preston in N. Y. With Her Daughter

Mrs. Ord Preston and her daughter, Miss Eleanor Preston, are spending several days in New York, where they are stopping at the St. Regis.

The marriage of Miss Preston to Capt. William L. Ritchie, U. S. Army Air Corps, will take place June 16 at 4:30 at St. John's Church, the Rev. Oliver J. Hart officiating. A reception at the Sulgrave Club will follow.

800 Attend Shouses' Party

Mrs. Jouett Shouse gave an able demonstration of the power of mind over matter during the week-end. She says that she personally was responsible for holding off the rain, which threatened all day Saturday, so that the outdoor carnival at her country home, Wolf Trap Farm, for the benefit of the Women's Institute of Professional Relations, might take place. Mrs. Shouse is chairman of the organization.

And a huge success the party was, with close to 800 people arriving for a buffet supper and lingering on late into the evening. Flares burned at the entrance to Wolf Trap to guide the guests, and on the hill top near the house was an out-door platform strung with lights (courtsey of the Vienna (Va.) Fire Department), where Sidney's orchestra played for dancing.

Taxi dancers, who offered their services at 10 cents a dance, were under the capable guidance of Mme. Edgar Prochnik, and were dressed in cunning brief frocks of green and white checked gingham.

William MacCracken ran a dart-throwing game in one of the many booths which had been set up on the lawn. There was bottle-throwing, with Griffith Warfield among those in there pitching and trying to extinguish candles for a prize; Mitzi's Mansion, where Mrs. Harold Sims presided over a grab-bag; poker dice, in the capable hands of George Pulver (Miss Belle Johnson seemed to be the big winner of the evening); fortune telling, for which Mrs. Robert Munroe kept the appointment book, and Mrs. Higginson Rogers' booth, "Rogers Rowdy Row," with poker and other games galore. Wendell Wilkie, the power tycoon, was one of her best customers.

Mrs. Gale McLean, Miss Betty Shouse, and Miss Anne Perin were "jockeys" for the horse races which attracted many of the guests. The mint julep bar did a flourishing business with Jouett Shouse, Capt. Robert Munroe, and Dr. Ned Ellison among the bar tenders, dressed in white monkey jackets.

Among the many guests were Senator and Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg, who sat under a tree; Arthur Vandenberg, jr., doing an expert tango with Mrs. MacCracken; Mr. and Mrs. Walter White with Judd Thompson; Mrs. Pearsons Rust walking about with Benjamin Plunket; Dr. Hans Thomsen chatting with Miss Marcia Umbsen; Mrs. Marshall Exnicios, who analyzed handwriting; Miss Marion Shouse, presiding over a fishbowl game; Ralph Snowden Hill and Willis Ballinger among the bachelors; Mrs. John Coswell, Mrs. John Revburn, in sweater and skirt; Mrs. George T. Pettingill, Mrs. Eldridge Jordan, and many others.

One of the most entertaining features of the evening was the square dancing group, which gave several exhibitions on the big platform, with John Drier, Daniel Partridge, and Phillip Young as figure callers." Mrs. Meade Fletcher, Mrs. Creighton Peet and Miss Ann Wilkinson—the two latter—discarded their shoes and danced barefoot about the slippery floor and Miss Rosalind Wright were among the star performers.

Then there was a group of Swedish folk dancers, over here to appear at "Sweden Day" at the World's Fair later this month, who did several numbers dressed in the colorful costume of their country. They were brought to the party under the wing of the Counselor of the Swedish Legation and Mme. Wennerberg.

Oscar Crosby and His Daughter Are Honor Guests at Luncheon

Mr. and Mrs. Sterling Lacy, whose home near Leesburg has become a rendezvous on week-ends for members of Capital society, were hosts at a luncheon for 30 of their friends there yesterday. Honor guests were Oscar Crosby, of Warrenton, and his daughter, Mrs. Crosby Miller.

Others in the company were Lady Malcolm, who has returned from a visit to the World's Fair, to rejoin her son, Angus Malcolm, of the British Embassy, who was also at the luncheon; Mme. Wankowicz, wife of the Counselor of the Polish Embassy; Michael Budny, of the embassy; the former Secretary of War and Mrs. Patrick Hurley, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Henderson, Mrs. Albert Dupont, Baron Bucovich and Baroness Bucovich, who recently arrived from Europe to join him here; Mrs. William T. Mann, Mrs. Granger Blair, Arthur Krock, Mr. and Mrs. William P. McCracken, Mrs. Mondell Gregg, Sherlock Davis, George Abell, Frank Littleton, Maxfield Dunlap, Jan Rosen, Mr. and Mrs. Lothrop Stoddard and Mr. and Mrs. Warner Snyder.

Mr. and Mrs. William Lacy, son and daughter-in-law of the host, also motored out from Washington for the party. They are building a small summer home nearby.

Mr. Stacy Weds Eleanor Dodd

In a setting of white Easter lilies, gladioli, larkspur and palms, Miss Eleanor Warfield Dodd, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Wilson Dodd, of Takoma Park, Md., and cousin of the Duchess of Windsor, was married yesterday at 4 o'clock to William Arthur Stacy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur A. Stacy, of Montgomery Hills, Md. The ceremony took place at the Takoma Park Presbyterian Church, the Rev. R. Paul Schearrer officiating. The occasion was the twenty-seventh wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Dodd and also the fourth anniversary of another daughter, Mrs. Frank L. Mansuy, who was matron of honor.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her gown of white mousseline de soie was made with a tight bodice and long sleeves appliqued in satin, and a heart-shaped satin halo held her tulle veil in place. She carried a shower bouquet of gardenias and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Mansuy was in cornflower blue lace and net, made with a full skirt and puffed sleeves, and in her hair she wore a velvet bow with long streamers to match. Her flowers were yellow roses and delphinium. The bridesmaids were Mrs. Paul M. Prosser, of Norman, Okla.; Miss Christine Stacy, of Montgomery Hills, Md., sister of the bridegroom; Miss Sophie Gurevich and Miss Elizabeth Zoll, of Washington. They were gowned alike in rainbow colors of pastel, peach, aqua, yellow and blue net, with hooped skirts and wore matching velvet bows. They carried bouquets of yellow roses.

Mr. Mansuy was best man, and the ushers were Earl Stacy, brother of the bridegroom; Aubrey Marshall, his uncle; Charles Corse, and Randall Loftis.

A reception for 200 guests followed the ceremony at the home of the bride's parents. Mrs. Dodd wore cornflower blue lace, a large leghorn hat and a corsage of purple orchids, while Mrs. Stacy, mother of the bridegroom, was attired in a black lace gown trimmed with white. With this she wore a wide-brimmed white straw hat and a corsage of gardenias.

After a wedding trip through the South, the couple will live at 142 Carroll avenue, Takoma Park. The bride, a graduate of the Georgetown University school of dental hygiene, is junior past president of the District Dental Hygiene Association and is a member of Kappa Gamma sorority. She is a direct descendant of Pagan de Warfield, of England, and his son, Richard Warfield, who came to Maryland in 1662, and also of Edward Rutledge, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence. She is a cousin of former Gov. C. A. Warfield, of Maryland.

Mr. Stacy attended Benjamin Franklin University and the Columbia School of Drafting. He is a direct descendant of Thomas Jefferson and Chief Justice John Marshall and Vice President Thomas R. Marshall.

Hallie Flanagan Addresses Future Debs At Commencement of Foxcroft School

SOME OF THE MOST prominent future debutantes of this country will receive their diplomas this afternoon at the commencement of Foxcroft School, of which Miss Charlotte H. Noland is head. The ceremony, which will be followed by a supper, will be held in the garden. Mrs. Hallie Flanagan, National Director of the WPA Federal Theater Project of Washington, will be the main speaker.

MISS Van Meter de Butts, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry de Butts, of Upperville, Va., and Washington, carried off the blue ribbon in the first class at the horse show of the Madeira School on Saturday afternoon. She rode in several classes and won third in the pair class, riding with Miss Lorna Morley. Miss Nancy Weller, of Alexandria, rode well also, and was second in the pair class, riding with Miss Joan Morgenthau, daughter of the Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau.

The show was held on the beautiful grounds of the school. Mrs. David Wing, the headmistress, and the students served refreshments to the hundreds of guests there to enjoy the exhibit.

MR. AND MRS. James Renville McMann, of Middleburg, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Jessica Thayer McMann, to Matthais Hayes, of New York. The wedding will take place at the home of Miss McMann's grandmother, Mrs. W. W. Green, of Inglewood, N. J., on June 24. Mr. and Mrs. McMann and several of their friends will attend.

The future bride, who has been doing radio work in New York for the past year, flew down to Middleburg on Thursday and spent two days with her parents.

MR. AND MRS. Frank Campbell Littleton, jr., who were married in Charleston, S. C., in April, have arrived at their Middleburg home after a wedding trip to Havana, Miami Beach, New Orleans and Jacksonville. They had their first chance to chaperone last week when they went over Decoration Day to The Shanties, on Mount Airy estate on the Rappahannock River, for some fishing with a group of young friends. Others in the party were Mrs. Littleton's sister, Miss Polly Montague, Miss Neville Atkinson, Miss Janet Roszel, Robert Turner, Gwynne Tayloe, Richard Tayloe and Robert Sharp.

CAPT. William Empson Jones, of Middleburg, an Englishman and former officer in the British cavalry, who has lived here for ten years, will be among the hundred former British officers to form a guard of honor for the King and Queen when they are in Washington. All these officers must have kept their nationality. They will wear civilian clothes and their medals when they attend the reception for the King and Queen at the embassy on Friday morning. Mrs. Jones will also be present, and two of their daughters, the Misses Stephine and Dorothy Jones, who are at school in Westtown, Pa., have been given special leave to come here for the reception.

Harrises Mark Silver Wedding

Several hundred members and friends of the Foundry Methodist Church gathered at the parsonage yesterday to celebrate the twenty-fifth wedding anniversary of the rector, the Rev. Frederick Brown Harris, and Mrs. Harris.

The hostess wore a white lace gown. Among those assisting were Mrs. Robert Rich, Mrs. Ralps E. Church, Walter Jones, George B. Woods, Harry Woolever, Irving T. Ball, John C. Millian, Jacob Payton, Miss Nellie May Harris, of Glassborough, N. J., sister of the host, and the two daughters of the house, the Misses Barbara Louise and Connie Harris.

Hundreds of gifts, tokens and telegrams were received from friends in many States, include an inscribed punch bowl and tray from the official board of the church. Bishop Edwin H. Hughes sent a telegram of regret at being unable to be present.

D. C. Opera Group Plans Fall Drive

Opera lovers of the District turned out en masse for the Civic Grand Opera Association organization luncheon held at the Women's City Club yesterday afternoon.

Mrs. Ruth H. Snodgrass, vice chairman of the opera association's board of governors, presided, assisted by other board members attending—Dr. Edith Seville-Coale, Mme. Amelia Conti, Miss Clelia Fioravanti and A. Conti Berenguer. Plans of the association to sponsor a season of three operas here next winter through the establishment of an organization of at least 3,000 members were divulged. Committees for the organization of an opera drive in the early fall were announced.

Several Mexican and Cuban selections were offered by Juanito Valencia, young Cuban tenor.

Among those attending the luncheon were Mrs. Arthur J. Seaton, Mrs. Frank A. Bargfeld, Mrs. Allen Rouse, Mrs. Roy M. Palmer, Mrs. Charles L. Chambers, Mrs. Anne Yago McGuffey, Mrs. Frederick L. Benton, Mrs. Martin Fredenhagen, Mme. Rose Arnold, Mrs. Mabel Woodward Johnson, Mme. Suzanne Laurent, Mrs. Evangeline Tully, Mrs. Florence Peak.

New Board to Meet

The newly elected executive board of the Professional Writers' Club of the Y. W. C. A. will meet for the first time tonight in the Administration Building. The club's regular monthly meeting will be held on June 12.

Kanes Honor Two Sub-Debs

Maj. and Mrs. Norman Kane entertained at an informal supper party for young people at their home on H street last night in honor of the Misses Elizabeth and Nancy Barringer, subdebutante daughters of Mrs. George Barringer. Miss Elizabeth Barringer has been studying art at the Corcoran Gallery this year and her sister has just returned from Converse College in Spartanburg, S.

Among those present were the Misses Francois Alderman and Marguerite Burgess, Mr. and Mrs. William Wittausch, John Stigall, Edwin Tomlinson, Oke Nordgren, Arthur Clawson, Edward Amadola and Robert Woodbury.

Mrs. Barringer assisted at the party.

D.A.R. to Honor Miss Chenoweth

Miss Lillian Chenoweth, regent of the District, will be the guest of honor of the Abigail Hartman Rice Chapter, D. A. R., tomorrow at 8 o'clock at the home of Mrs. William Bullis, 8501 Houston street, Silver Spring, Md.

The chapter glee club, under the direction of Mrs. Mallette Spengler, with Mrs. Emory T. Ozabal as accompanist, will sing.

Plans will be completed for a dinner dance for chapter members the latter part of June. Miss Mary Dobyns is dance chairman.

Livingston Manor Chapter will have its first executive board meeting of the 1939-40 season tonight at the home of the regent, Mrs. Ford E. Young, jr. Other officers are vice regent, Mrs. Thomas Gattis; chaplain, Mrs. J. F. Mary Haworth's Mail

Confronted by Problem of Daughter's Illegitimate Pregnancy, Hysterical Mother Asks Advice

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Your advice of May 19, given to "Pat P.," to confide her trouble to her mother, has been followed by my own daughter, who has brought the same problem home to me. Now I am as bewildered as she. What am I to do? I feel sure that the boy would marry her, but they have no means of support and the girl would lose her job if it was found out. And what about the families on both sides? Must they bear the disgrace which these two young people have invited?

"Grateful Admirer," your correspondent of May 31, writes to say that she knows of other similar cases in which you gave helpful advice in working out emergency plans. Well, I want to know what is best to do, as my daughter is almost wild with fear of disgrace, thinking of our family and how to meet the situation. We are in no position to take care of the girl and she says she will not go through with it.

Now, what am I to do to prevent her from doing something desperate? I cannot work this out by myself and you can't throw two young people on their own without means of support, and it costs plenty to have babies even when the parents are legally married. Please don't think that this girl has not had the proper training. She has, but it seems that both forgot all about family and friends at the time of doing wrong, and now expect the mothers to come to the rescue. So please help us to help these young people out of this mess.

HEARTBROKEN MOTHER.

The Honorable Remedy

DEAR H. M.: This is a crisis in which considerations of false and petty social pride should not be permitted to dictate decisions. Think less about "disgrace," or what "the neigbors would think if they knew," and more about safeguarding your daughter's moral and physical well-being. If these aspects of the situation are adequately met, the social aspect of the situation will automatically take care of itself, in all good time.

It appears that your performance, at the moment, isn't much better than your doughter's. In giving way to undisguised panic, each is contributing to the other's mounting hysteria—which state of mind, on the part of both, must be brought under control as the first step toward finding a tolerable solution of the problem. Reactions of cowardly terror never solved anything, because, obviously, they progressively paralyze one's ability to think clearly and act wisely.

The only sensible attitude to take is this: An emergency has arisen which must be met calmly, decently and thoughtfully. No constructive purpose can be served in moaning about, or brooding over, the regrettable aspects of the situation—past, present or to come. It is your immediate business to set your daughter an example of mental and spiritual composure, which will convey to her the strength to face, in a courageous and self-controlled (perhaps even in a sacrificial) way, whatever lies before her.

The person who is either so young, or so weekly dependent in nature, as to need a parent's guidance and support in times of crisis, is a person who is inordinately susceptible to emotional influences; and the parent who would relapse into hand-winging when this type of emergency must be met is showing some cause why his child fell victim to temptation.

However, to take a happier view of the matter—all of us are familiar with the old saying that "every cloud has its silver lining," and it may be that the silver lining in this cloud will prove to be the necessitous development, by both you and your daughter, of greater strength of character than you have erstwhile known. All who have met adversity with gallant spirit have inevitably discovered that they were the richer for the experience, once it had passed into personal history. And all who have played a coward's part when tested by trials have emerged from the experience poorer in spirit than they were before.

Now, to proceed with specific suggestions: If your daughter is determined "not to go through with" having the baby, and if you should see fit to indorse that craven decision, there is no legitimate co-operation which anyone can give her, in solving her problem. However, there are two other courses of action open to her—either of which is, in my opinion, infinitely preferable to the dishonorable, cowardly, amoral and dangerous device of attempted abortion.

The logical solution, it seems to me, would have its inception in immediate marriage to the boy who is the father of her expected child—since, you say, you "feel sure he would marry her." Surely, on the basis of so decently courageous an acceptance of the consequences of their previous actions; and with their combined resources of youth, health and strength, they should find the way gradually opening to them, whereby they may discharge their just responsibility in a creditable manner.

They could be married very quietly in a neighboring State, and no one need know the exact date of the wedding. In many instances of secret marriages the couple keep their secret until the imminent advent of offspring compels an announcement, as a concession to the proprities. Usually, too, there is a flurry of gossip and speculation—even when no foundation for it exists—but it dies as quickly as it blows up, as witness the old saying, "a nine-days' wonder," which implies that even the most momentous happenings lose their discussion value after nine days.

If your daughter hesitates to have the child, or to marry the boy, only because she fears "disgrace" in the form of wagging tongues— she is starting at shadows. If she keeps her own counsel; takes no one save you into her confidence; keeps her chin up and serene countenance, and with her husband at her side, the gossips can't do her one bit of harm and she is foolish to think they could.

The alternative to marriage, and I submit it as second-best, is for her to enter the Florence Crittenton Home, at 4759 Reservoir road, telephone Emerson 4300, and to remain there until after the child has been born and some long-range plans have been made for the latter's care at other hands than her own. If the latter course is elected, I suggest you make an immediate appointment, by telephone, to talk confidentially with the case worker there.

It is the admirable policy of this humane institution to assist the girl and her family in developing some "face-saving" plan which meets the two-fold purpose of meeting her individual need, while tacitly encouraging friends, acquaintances and erstwhile business associates to suppose she has gone away to some far-distant city to accept a position, or for a necessary interval of rest, or perhaps to stay with relatives who are in need of her services.

A girl may enter the Florence Crittenton Home as early in pregnancy as she chooses, and may remain until her child is six months of age. While the Home does not encourage adoption, believeing it is best for mother and child to remain together, nevertheless it does not actively oppose adoptions, and, in one instance that I happen to know about, sympathetically indorsed the adolescent mother's (and her guardians') action in relinquishing the child to "adopting" parents.

Business Girls, in Hurry, Often Eat Too Little Their Diet, Frequently Deficient, Survey By Y. W. C. A. Shows; Bad Health Results

THE BUSINESS GIRL has an aversion to being lectured on nutrition—it is probably a holdover from the days when mother kept saying "eat your spinach!"

But whatever the reason, Edith M. Gates, director of the national health program of the Young Women's Christian Association, has found business girls as a group are totally disinterested in listening to talks on vitamins. So, the newest approach is: What do you eat?

Encouraging the business girl to talk about what she eats has been highly successful as a policy, but from the standpoint of nutrition the revelations have been appalling. It appears that the diet of the average business girl is so far short of her requirements that it is held responsible for fatigue, indigestion, nervousness and insomnia.

Shopping Another Bane

Basically, the trouble may be the business girl's reluctance to take time to eat. When she is working hard, it is easier to have something sent in from the drugstore. And when she does have a noon hour to herself, it's too good an opportunity for shopping to be wasted in eating. All too many women grab a quick bite at a lunch counter and hasten away to try on a dress or hat.

And when a woman starts saving for a fur coat, it's the food bill that takes the first slash. Other expenses are more or less stable and not nearly so easily juggled.

So when the business woman lists what she eats, it is very likely to be coffee and a doughnut for breakfast; a sandwich and a beverage for lunch; a meat, vegetable, salad, dessert and coffee for dinner. In spite of the fairly good evening meal, such a diet is so inadequate that, if continued over a period of time, it will seriously affect health and efficiency.

Time is the main element in getting the food you need. It takes a little time to plan for the foods you need, and then it takes time to eat them. The difference in cost—if any—is negligible. Cabbage is cheap, so is whole wheat bread, and a glass of milk costs no more than most other soft drinks.

Essential Foods Are Few

The list of foods you need every day is not long; one pint of milk, two ounces of whole grain cereal containing the wheat germ, four slices of whole wheat bread, one egg, four ounces of lean meat, two cooked and two raw vegetables, and two fresh fruits, one of them a citrus fruit. Slim as it is, that list furnishes the elements nutritionists consider essential to health: the 5,000 to 6,000 units of Vitamin A, 900 units of Vitamin B, 200 units of Vitamin C, and 100 units of Vitamin G, together with adequate minerals and protein.

What do you eat? The chances are that you follow the "grab a bite" system, which slowly but steadily undermines your health—your best business asset. It would be smart to switch to a diet that builds vitality.

Perfume Should Be Matched to Fabric

With cottons leading the summer fashion parade, it's sound practice to match your perfume to the fabric of your frock. Delicate floral scents are in keeping with cottons, but exotic musks and slumbrous sandalwoods strike a discord with the crisp linens, piques or the flimsy organdies.

Here are some suggestions for correct coupling of materials and perfume scents: Organdy, honeysuckle; seersucker, sweet pea; linen, gardenia; gingham, lilac; challis, lily of the valley; pique, violet; voile, jasmin; lace, orchid.

New Metal Serving Articles Make Food Attractive

By Martha Ellyn.

The Post Food Editor.

THERE'S SOMETHING about our hot foods being served sizzling hot and our cold foods frosted and tinkling cold that further enhances well-cooked food. Trust the alert-minded manufacturers to think of appealing, medium-priced table service to accomplish such for the homemaker. The attractive new aluminum tableware made from a new metal has most of the advantages of silver without the expense. It has a soft, silvery, lustrous surface that does not tarnish or stain. These characteristics, plus the fact that it is a splendid conductor of heat and cold, unquestionably commend it for table use. In design there are the plain, unornamented pieces from which to choose, especially well adapted to monograms, and those with mounts of old brass in items for both formal and informal occasions.

Among the serving articles especially recommended for keeping foods at the proper serving temperature are the platters, double serving dishes, gravy boats, sauce servers and metal tumblers with companion pitcher. If you want your steaks and chops sizzling hot and your cool drinks even more refreshing because they frost so quickly and stay cold longer, serve them in the new metal table service.

Sister—That's too far. I have to be back by 6:30.

Mrs. Gink—Is that Mooney boy coming again?

Sister—I don't know. Anyway I have to be back by 6:30.

Grandma—We should have decided where we were going before we started.

Mr. Gink—Do you want to drive through Rock Creek Park?

Junior—I wanna go to the Zoo——

Mr. Gink—We're not going to STOP anywhere.

Grandma—We might go out by Mount Vernon——

Sister—Everybody goes by Mount Vernon. Let's drive some place different.

Mrs. Gink—Let's just drive out in the country somewhere. Maybe we can buy some early apples——

Mr. Gink—We're not going to stop to buy things.

Sister—I wish we could go some new place. I'm so sick of this old scenery.

Grandma—Well the thing we should have done before we started out was to have just sat down and decided on some definite place to go.

Junior—Say! This is the same old drive we took last Sunday!

Mr. Gink—Well where do you want to go? Just say the word.

Junior—I wanna go to Baltimore.

Sister—Everybody goes to Baltimore. Besides, I have to be back——

Mr. Gink—Well now hurry up and make up your minds. Do you want to go into Virginia or Maryland?

Sister—Virginia has the best scenery.

Grandma—Well, it's no use to look for scenery if you're going to go so fast you can't see it.

Mrs. Gink—Say, if we drove down toward Frederick, we might stop in and see the Bounces'.

Mr. Gink—We're not going to STOP anywhere.

Grandma—We should have decided this thing in advance.

Sister—Let's drive some place where it's not so crowded. I don't see why everybody wants to come out and jam up the roads.

Junior—Wait, there's a man with balloons!

Mr. Gink—We haven't time to stop.

Sister—Say, We're going through Rock Creek Park again.

Mr. Gink—Well, where else do you want to go?

Mrs. Gink—I think this is very beautiful. Now if you'll just look across there——

Grandma—It would be all right if you could just see it and didn't have to whiz past.

Junior—Why don't we go faster? Say what's the matter with that guy ahead?

Mr. Gink—It's probably some woman driver.

Junior—I'm thirsty.

Mr. Gink—We haven't time to stop.

Sister—Where are we going from here?

Mr. Gink—That's for all of you to decide.

Mrs. Gink—Oh say, if we went down by Hyattsville, we might see the Swanks' new house.

Mr. Gink—We're not going to stop anywhere.

Junior—It wouldn't be so hot if we'd go faster.

Grandma—We're going too fast now.

Mrs. Gink—If we could just get out on some country road where it wouldn't be so crowded—

Mr. Gink—Well, where do you want to go?

Sister—We can't go very far now. I've got to get back.

Grandma—We should have decided this thing—

Junior—I wanna ice cream cone—

Mr. Gink—We haven't time to stop.

Sister—Say! Do you know where we are going? We're going to Hains Point!

A Woman's New York

GIRL ABOUT TOWN:—The National Broadcasting Company is bearing down heavily on television these days, with shows every night. I went to one the other night, most of which was devoted to cartoon comedies, but the human feature was that charming song stylist, Hildegarde, who is a feature of the radio and of swanky night club shows. NBC, however, is concentrating on a girl from Erie, Pennsylvania, named Amelia Umnitz, who went to school for four years and served four years on her home town newspaper, The Dispatch-Herald. Amelia, for all her television success, is not overly optimistic about its early public acceptance, and feels that it will be several years before sets are available in the homes. If this be treason, make the most of it, and I am sure that La Belle Umnitz will not mind my saying this. Hildy was swell the other night, but, then, she is swell all the time. . .

Mary Lewis, the famous fashion expert, tells me the rules for success in her chosen field. They run as follows: Good health, persistence, great ability to get along with people and considerable talent in her profession. She also says the best way to begin such a career is as a salesgirl since that teaches the beginner precisely what people want to buy . . .

IT WAS A great day the other day on Fifth Avenue when Archbishop Spellman, the successor to Cardinal Hayes, was enthroned in Saint Patrick's Cathedral. Five thousand people filled the church, and 50,000 lined the sidewalks. It was a reverent and colorful occasion, and the million Roman Catholics of the local archdiocese were greatly impressed and thrilled by the accession of their new archbishop. . .

STRANGE THINGS happen out in Flushing. At the Music Hall there the other day, when Grace Moore was singing, a young couple checked their two-year-old daughter at the cloakroom. When the singing was over they picked up the tyke. The girl says she behaved very nicely, never even bawled once.

Collins Fears Changes in D. C. Budget

Relief Increases Dangerous, He Says; Civic Leaders Are Pleased With Bill

Reception of the additions made by the Senate Appropriations Committee to the District supply bill ranged from hearty welcome to frank opposition last night in a poll of civic leaders and members of the House Appropriations Committee.

Indications were that the revised bill would meet opposition in the House even if it passed the Senate.

Strongest objections to the Senate changes were voiced by Representative Collins (Democrat), of Mississippi, chairman of the House subcommittee on appropriations, who wrote the bill as passed by the House.

Hears Bankrupicy

"If you want to bankrupt the District the quickest way is to give everyone a job that asks for it," he said, in reference to the increased relief budget. "If I had thought those increases were a good idea I would have given them."

As for the $2,750,000 increase in the Federal contribution to District expenses voted by the Senate Committee, Chairman Collins declared it was "idle to anticipate that it will pass."

A warmer welcome for the changes came from Representative Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, who conceded that some of the increases were both needed and justified. Representative Casey (Democrat), of Massachusetts, reserving judgment until the matter had been discussed in committee, said in the meantime that "it's a good thing the District gets a break occasionally, anyway."

Stull Is Pleased

Harry N. Stull, vice president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, voiced the feelings of many other civic leaders when he declared the Senate committee's action was "on the whole very favorable and pleasing, particularly in the matter of schools, and in the raising of the Federal contribution. We'll be getting somewhere if they give us that increase."

Approval of the increased relief appropriation was expressed by F. J. McDonald, vice chairman of the public welfare committee of the federation, but he doubted that the rewritten bill would be passed unchanged.

"The history of the District budget is very much one of compromise," he said. "Maybe we'll get some extra, but I doubt if we'll get the full $2,800,000."

Johnson, Babson Exhort Utility Firms to Expand

Assistant Secretary of War Johnson, head of President Roosevelt's National Defense Power Committee, and Roger W. Babson, statistician and economist, last night appealed to the electric power industry to start an expansion program immediately.

Johnson said the surface has been "merely scratched" in the field of power preparedness in the event of a national defense emergency, in an article in the current issue of "Public Utilities Fortnightly."

Babson, in the same publication, said the "pendulum of evidence" in regard to the Administration's policy toward the utility industry is "swinging straight toward the right," and urged the power operators to "forget Washington and the New Deal, and take heart."

Haircut and Wedding Too Much For Snooky—She Lands in Jail

Snooky with Private J. W. Peters at Eighth Precinct

A wedding, a reception, a haircut and a bright blue ribbon all in one day swept Snooky off her four feet so hard she landed in jail for a night and a day.

Snooky, a white-haired terrier, whose three years have been spent complacently with her master, Judson O. Harrison, at 3140 Davenport street northwest, was confronted with this combination of blessings without warning Saturday. Her master was being married and in honor of the event Snooky had a haircut and a new blue ribbon about her throat.

The haircut and the wedding and the ribbon Snooky took in her stride. But when more than 200 people came to the Harrison home for a reception Saturday afternoon she was overcome.

Snooky was plodding along doggedly, as it were, when she was spied by a neighbor leading his own wire-haired terrier. This neighbor discovered she had no collar, tried to find a haven for her for the night and finally called police.

So before long two big policemen came along in a radio car and took Snooky to Eighth Precinct Station. She spent the night there, badgered out of sleep by any number of admiring cops, and then last night she got the crowning surprise of those puzzling 24 hours when her master's mother entered the station.

Snooky was back home last night, still a little uncertain about a state of affairs which did not include her master. But her mother, a 10-year-old wire-hair owned by the Harrisons, went back to the routine of eating and playing with a big rubber ball she had deserted while Snooky was gone.

William and Mary Alumni Elect

Williamsburg, Va., June 4 (AP).—Dr. Sidney B. Hall, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, was re-elected yesterday as president of the Alumni Association of the College of William and Mary.

J. S. Jenkins, of Greensboro, N. C., and B. D. Peachy, of Williamsburg, were elected vice president and secretary treasurer, respectively.

Named to the board of managers were Mrs. Ewell Crawford Ramsey, of Charlottesville; William F. C. Ferguson, of New York, and B. D. Peachy, Judge H. Lester Hooker, of the State corporation commission, was re-elected to the athletic committee.

Roosevelt Backs Moral Rearming

Moral Re-Armament—and the sixty-first birthday of its founder and chief proponent, Dr. Frank Buchman, founder of the Oxford Movement.

"The God-given thought, Moral Re-Armament," declared Dr. Buchman, "is a race with time to remake men and nations.

"It is the common sense way to restore the world to sanity."

A message from Gen. Pershing called for "all thinking people" to enlist in moral rearmament. He wrote:

"There is a spiritual emotion which underlies all true patriotism, and good citizenship itself is dependent upon the high sense of moral obligation of the people.

"Today, confronted by conditions so threatening to world peace, we must rededicate ourselves to the faith of our forefathers if we are to be worthy of our heritage."

Speakers from England, Scotland, France, Sweden and the United States, representing business and labor, hunger-marchers and revolutionists and aristocracy, sports headliners and authors, stepped up to the stage to tell how they had become converted to Moral Re-Armament, how the practice of M. R. A.'s fundamentals—honesty, purity, unselfishness, and love—had given them peace with themselves, their families and neighbors.

Earlier in the day 250 M. R. A. disciples gathered in the Mayflower to participate in a two-way transatlantic telephone broadcast between Washington and East London, England, where Dr. Buchman first proposed Moral Re-Armament as a solution to problems engendering world conflict.

Spokesmen from Holland, Bulgaria, Palestine, Scandinavia, and India, broadcasting from England, joined in expressing gratitude for the new spirit which, they said, was at work dissolving national and racial hatreds.

Dr. Buchman, Pennsylvania-born Lutheran minister, urged at both programs that Armistice Day be made a focal point of a world drive to bring the significance of Moral Rearmament before 100,000,000 people.

In a statement to the press, observing moral rearmament's first anniversary, the founder of the movement said:

"The future of the world depends not on what a few men in Europe may decide to do, but on what a million men in America decide to be. America can be the solvent of the world's difficulties.

"What America needs is a united voice.

Representative Treadway (Republican), of Massachusetts, read a pledge signed by 206 members of the British House of Commons in which they affirmed their "loyalty to those moral and spiritual principles which are more fundamental than any political or economic issue and which are the common heritage of our people."

George Eastman, former president of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, who flew from the Coast for the meeting, testified that in M. R. A. he had found the solution to his own business problems, and that the businessmen of the world were looking to America to take the lead in ending economic warfare.

How last year's European crisis with its threatened aerial bombardment, had awakened him to the realization that the battle for peace called for the same sacrifices as war was vividly described by "Bunny" Austin, famed British tennis player and a leader of M. R. A.

D. C. Ministers Congratulated On Anniversary of Pastorates

Dr. John E. Briggs, 30 Years at the Fifth Baptist Church, and the Rev. Enoch M. Thompson of Nativity Parish, Honored

Ministerial and marital anniversaries of local pastors yesterday brought felicitations from parishioners and other friends throughout the city.

At Fifth Baptist Church, Seventh and E streets southwest, members of the congregation, led by Dr. A. W. Cummings, chairman of the anniversary committee, tendered a reception to Dr. John E. Briggs upon his completion of a 30-year pastorate there.

Dr. Rufus W. Weaver, executive secretary of the District of Columbia Baptist Convention; leaders of the Sunday school, missionary and other societies greeted the cleric.

Meanwhile, the Rev. Enoch M. Thompson was congratulated upon his thirty-sixth year of service to the Nativity Parish, which he launched as a mission in 1903 when curate at St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Washington Circle. The occasion also marked the fortieth anniversary of his ordination to the ministry by the late Bishop Satterlee.

Two Methodist ecclesiastics also were honored, Dr. Frederick Brown Harris and Dr. Walter F. Atkinson, the latter observing jointly his fifth year as pastor of Dumbarton Avenue Methodist Church, and his and Mrs. Atkinson's thirty-second wedding anniversary. Dr. and Mrs. Harris celebrated their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary.

Albright Memorial Church commemorated its founding 13 years ago in a tent on the present site at Fourth and Rittenhouse streets northwest, with Dr. J. W. Thompson, first District superintendent of the church, as principal speaker. The Rev. George E. Schnabel, cofounder and its only pastor, spoke.

Veterans Fight 'Insidious Forces,' Dr. Cartwright Says

War veterans today are waging new battles—nor against steel and bayonets—but against "insidious and subtle forces" within America's own gates, Dr. John K. Cartwright said yesterday.

He spoke at the Church of the Immaculate Conception, of which he is rector at the blessing of the colors of the Frances J Hurney Post of the Catholic War Veterans. At the exercises were 1,200 persons, including hundreds of local and out-of-town war veterans.

Escorted by the National Guard of Honor of the American Legion, the uniformed participants, carrying their organization flags and banners marched into the edifice at Eighth and N streets northwest.

The Rev. Francis J. Hurney, after whom the post was named, died in 1933 after serving as rector of the Church of the Immaculate Conception, and as wartime Navy chaplain. He was founder of the Washington Catholic Radio Hour.

Post officers and committee chairmen present included David L. Gilsinn, Henry F. Hodges, John V. Dean, A. E. Smith, Frederick J. Roy, Ollie M. Schriver, Richard Ward, Michael Casey, William A. Murphy, William F. Gallagher and John J. Moriarty.

Twenty local posts and auxiliaries, as well as Brooklyn, Jersey City, New York, Staten Island, Long Island and other delegations, attended the services, at which Dr. Cartwright served as celebrant at mass.

Presbyterian, Episcopal Unity Held Certain

Dr. McCartney Says They Can Overcome Differences

Ultimate Presbyterian-Episcopal unity will be realized on the basis of the denominations' common objectives, Dr. Albert J. McCartney told his Covenant-First Presbyterian parishioners yesterday morning.

Lately returned to his pulpit from the general assembly, where he was a candidate for moderator, Dr. McCartney, discussing the Presbyterian "ABC," said that it is becoming more and more plain to the two churches that they have many things in common and their great objective is so overwhelmingly commanding that there is a growing conviction that they can both overcome the things that separate them and move toward unity.

Commissions representing both churches have met and issued a deliverance that is now being discussed, which places emphasis upon three points, Dr. McCartney added.

In the first place, he pointed out, stress is on the things that "we believe in common, it being discovered that it is not in matters of faith that the two churches differ, for they both accept the authority of the Scriptures, the great Catholic creeds, the sanctity of the two Sacraments, Baptism and the Lord's Supper, the Divinity of Christ and the Sovereignity of God."

Emphasis was also placed, he said, on the things that may be undertaken in common, such as pulpit exchanges, fraternal greetings and interchange of professors in theological seminaries.

The third point stressed in the deliverance, and the one looming as the highest hurdle in the way of union because of the differing views of the ministry held by the Presbyterian and Episcopal Churches, was the Concordat, Dr. McCartney said.

He said that, up to the present, the Episcopal Church will not recognize as 100 per cent valid the ordination of the Presbyterian ministry. Both churches, however, believe in Episcopal ordination—the ordination by a bishop in one, and the other by a Presbytery acting in the same.

Dr. McCartney explained that the concordat does not provide for re-ordination in any case, but for a form of commission whereby it would become quite possible for a Presbyterian minister to take pastoral charge of an Episcopal parish

Boys Rival G-Men

Two 10-year-old sleuths combined with police yesterday to track down two automobile thieves and their fence and restore the loot to its owner.

Noticing two men stripping a car of its wheels and radio in the rear of the 2700 block of Seventeenth street northeast, the boys jotted down the auto's tag number and that of a nearby truck apparently driven there by the men. They relayed the information to Twelfth Precinct Detective F. L. Gaver.

After tracing the license numbers, Gaver arrested the bandits, a fence to whom they had sold the auto equipment and restored it to its owner, Warren H. Eaton, 1916 Seventeenth street southeast, from whom the car had been stolen Saturday.

Religion Only Answer To Modern Troubles, Graduates Told

Religion is the only answer to the crisis facing modern civilization, Page McK. Etchison, religious work director of the Y. M. C. A., asserted yesterday in Southeastern University's baccalaureate sermon at Hamline Methodist Church.

Similar services were held at the Washington Cathedral for the Cathedral School for Girls; St. Paul's Lutheran Church, where the graduating class of Washington College of Law gathered, and at Metropolitan Baptist Church, scene of the graduation of a class of 46 students from the Columbia College of Christian Education.

"As we look about us we see the attack of totalitarianism, of atheistic ideologies and the revival of philosophies of atheism and agnosticism," said Etchison, president of the D. C. Organized Bible Class Association.

Columbia College graduates received their diplomas from Dr. Elsie Wade Stone, president of the school, assisted by Benjamin J. Brooks, chairman of the board of trustees

Civil Service Promotion Tests Urged

Advisory Council Suggests All Posts Be Filled From Ranks By Advancement

The powerful advisory Council of Personnel Administration, set up by executive order to map a new deal in Federal employe affairs, has recommended a detailed promotion system for the Government service, stressing an open competitive examination method for filling vacancies by advancement from within, to be enforced by stopping payrolls in cases of violations.

Announcement of the plan was made yesterday, when Council Chairman Frederick N. Davenport published a letter to Civil Service Commission President Mitchell containing the recommendations.

Agrees On Objectives

The letter was in reply to commission suggestions of May 3. The council said it was "not in disagreement" with the commission's major objectives, but offered a revision of the general plan.

Principal recommendations of the council were:

Clear definition of the term "promotion" to include advancement from one class of position to another, regardless of whether the position is covered by the classification act. This was taken to mean that the promotion system should apply to the entire Government service.

Promotion should be on a competitive basis, providing as far as possible for persons already in the service to fill vacancies in higher jobs.

Violaters Lose Pay

Examinations shall be conducted according to rules laid down by the Civil Service Commission. The commission itself shall hold general competitive examinations for jobs common to more than one department or agency, but each department shall hold its own examinations for other positions, subject to "post-audit" by the commission. The commission shall also conduct examinations for the second category of positions for departments which "fail to fulfill the responsibility."

The commission shall certify facts of continued violation to the proper disbursing officers, who shall stop payment of salaries to persons responsible for the infraction.

No more than one examination shall be given to an employe for promotion to a given position.

Service ratings, education and experience, or written or oral tests, may serve, singly or together, as the bases for promotion.

You Mustn't Fight Or Bite Policemen, Tipsy Trio Learns

Twice in the clutches of the law on progressively serious charges was the record of a merrymaking triumvirate, made up of two Maryland residents and a District man yesterday.

First arrested as they scuffled at Fourteenth and K streets northwest, they were freed from the First Police Precinct after two of them forfeited $5 collateral on disorderly conduct charges.

Shortly afterward Eighth Precinct Policeman G. W. Coleman took the trio in charge after he noticed their car weaving through traffic at Connecticut and Macomb streets northwest. Drunk, driving while drunk, and assaulting an officer were the charges chalked up at the Eighth Precinct after one of the men allegedly bit Coleman's partner, Patrolman U. F. Cornwell.

A Distinguished Director Pays Capital a Visit

Berthold Viertel to Give Address Tonight; Hollywood Discovers New Casting Method; This, That and the Other About the Theater

BERTHOLD VIERTEL, Viennese film and stage director, will give the director's view on consumer demand for the portrayal of social and economic problems on the screen tonight at 8:30 in the Palisade Park Field House, at a meeting being sponsored by the Washington chapter of Film Audiences for Democracy—known as Films for Democracy until its merger with Associated Film Audiences a few weeks ago.

BELL

Mr. Viertel, who is stopping in Washington briefly on his way to Hollywood to direct American films, is perhaps best known for his productions of "Rhodes of Africa" and "The Passing of the Third Floor Back." Hollywood knows him for his work during the days of silent pictures, when he made both Paul Muni's and Ruth Chatterton's first films. He is celebrated abroad for the discovery of the European actor, Oscar Homolka—who played the role of Oom Paul Kruger in "Rhodes"—the playwright, Max Catte, and Gabriel Pascal, producer of "Pygmalion," who was given his first acting part by Mr. Viertel.

Also scheduled for the meeting tonight, which will be open to the public without charge, is a showing of the documentary film, "The Story of the United States Coast Guard," a production of the United States Film Service.

The local chapter of Film Audiences for Democracy has already enrolled approximately 500 members in its two months of organization and plans to continue its program of meetings and lectures during the summer months.

No matter whether you drive out of Washington to the northeast or the northwest, you will run into films of last Thursday night's bloody battle between Mr. Nova and Mr. Baer. The fight films are being shown at Sidney Lust's Cameo Theater, in Mount Rainier, Md., and at Henry Heiser's State Theater, in Bethesda. The pictures show the full 11 rounds and are complete in every detail. The engagements at both theaters began yesterday and will continue throughout the week.

Cheryl Crawford announces that she and Day Tuttle and Richard Skinner—both formerly associated with the Washington Civic Theater and coproducers in the presentation of "Family Portrait"—have sold the British rights to the play to O'Bryen, Linnit & Dunfee, London producing agents. Plans now are to present it in a West End theater early in the fall, with Flora Robson playing the part of Mary, created on this side by Judith Anderson. "Family Portrait" has run 13 successful weeks at the Morosco Theater, in New York.

Earlier in the play's run, it had been thought that Miss Anderson herself would go to England to appear in the play there, but more recent developments indicate that when "Family Portrait" has completed its Broadway engagement, it will tour the United States, with Miss Anderson and the present cast in their original roles.

Either way, it's nice going for Day and Dick.

At the season's closing meeting of the Blackfriars Theater Guild, announcement was made of the group's schedule of productions for the fall by President Adah May Brady. If you think you can remember them, the plays to be presented next season will include "Tovarich," "Outward Bound," "Busman's Honeymoon," "Shadow and Substance," "Our Town," "What a Life," "Brother Orchid" and "Zeal of Thy House." In that list are to be found some of the most distinguished plays of recent seasons. The Blackfriars have their work cut out for them.

Something new in the way of casting methods has come out of Hollywood.

Search for a girl with "voice appeal" ended at the Paramount studio last week with the signing of Osa Massen for a leading role in "Are Husbands Necessary?", co-starring Madeline Carroll and Fred MacMurray. Convinced that no ordinary woman could compete convincingly with Miss Carroll for MacMurray's affections, Producer Jeff Lazarus and Director Edward H. Griffith hit upon the "voice appeal" idea. They listened to innumerable sound tracks made by various actresses in scenes and tests. From these they selected half a dozen without ever having seen the faces of the players.

After the sound tracks had been identified, they interviewed and tested those they had selected by voice only. Miss Massen's youthful beauty backed up her unusual voice and she was signed for the part.

Miss Massen, it seems, is Danish, with only two films to her credit, both made in Copenhagen. She was under contract to a London company for five months, but spent all of that time learning English. The company went broke before she ever got before the cameras. In Hollywood, Miss Massen hasn't had much opportunity either, until this "break." She is 5 feet 4½ inches tall, weighs 116 pounds and has light brown hair and gray-green eyes. In private life, she is the wife of Allan Hersholt, son of Jean Hersholt, here last January for the Presidents' birthday celebrations and one of the most popular of the visiting stars.

Houston Davis, drummer and entertainer de luxe, with Wally Stoefler's Band, opening tonight in the Spanish Garden Ballroom at Glen Echo Park, is the lad from Tahelequah, Okla., celebrated by Robert Ripley in "Believe It or Not." Davis made a world record for a drum roll two years ago, by beating the hides for a continuous period of six hours 30 minutes and 20 seconds. That's rollin' your own with a vengeance.

Tonight is the night when the Cross Roads Theater, down at Bailey's Cross Roads, in Virginia, breaks out its new season with "Abie's Irish Rose," under the direction of Howard F. Wentworth. All seats reserved; curtain at 8:40.

The Virginians, that white-tied-and-tailed male sextet with the splendidly blended voices, will be held for another week at the Earle Theater. They already are at work on a complete new program of songs, featuring "Donkey Serenade," "Rose of the Rio Grande" and "Begin the Beguine."

Famous-Last-Words Note

That's all for today. See you—pardon, I'm in the wrong column!

A Youthful Lincoln Ponders a Doubtful Future

as he appears in the title role of the Twentieth Century-Fox production of "Young Mr. Lincoln," the most widely discussed of all the current films since its world premiere in Springfield, Ill., the night of Memorial Day. From all report, Mr. Fonda achieves a peak of interpretative excellence in this subject that he has never reached before and may never reach again. "Young Mr. Lincoln" will be the next attraction at Loew's Palace Theater

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, June 4.

SOCIAL NOTES: Paul Robeson went to the Savoy-Plaza the other afternoon and asked a clerk: "On what floor is the cocktail party being given?" . . . "On the fifth," the clerk replied—pointing to a rear hallway, and added: "Take the service elevator" . . . "Ordinarily I might," Robeson returned, "but it happens that at this cocktail party I'm the guest of honor."

THEATER DEPARTMENT: A few days before "Stars in Your Eyes" closed, for lack of business, Fred Allen and Jack Haley met Jimmy Durante, the star of that show . . . "I'm coming to see your show tonight," Haley told Durante . . . "Good," said Jimmy. "I'll be looking for you. But how will I know you?" . . . "That should be easy," said Allen. "Haley will be the one in the audience."

SPORTS DEPARTMENT: Fefe's Monte Carlo, New York's newest and swankiest cafe, had its first fight the other night. At 1 a. m. Prince Alexandre Tarsaidze was dancing with a young lady who expects to leave for Reno today . . . Her husband entered the room, rushed toward the prince and started swinging . . . Gene Cavallero, owner of the Colony Restaurant and co-owner of the Monte Carlo, reached the assailant in time. "Who are you?" asked the irate husband . . . "I," informed the proprietor of New York's most elegant dining places, "am the bouncer."

WAR DEPARTMENT: Eddy Duchin, just starting his Waldorf engagement, went to St. Catherines, Ontario, the other night to play at the annual show of the Kiwanis . . . The show was held in the St. Catherine's Armory . . . Duchin's contract contained a clause providing: "In the event that this armory should be required for use during mobilization, the contract is void."

ILLUSTRATED SECTION: Conde Nast, Grace Moore and her husband, Valentin Perera, visited the Cuban Village at the fair grounds last week . . . Miss Moore posed for a caricture drawn by Tom Green . . . "Is it a good caricature?" the artist asked Perera . . . "It is so good," Miss Moore's husband replied, "that I'm compelled to do this to it"—and he destroyed it.

TRAVEL DEPARTMENT: Sinclair Lewis tells this story of Richard Harding Davis: A friend was about to sail for Holland. "Maybe I'll go along with you," Davis suggested . . . "The boat sails tonight, so what about your passport?" asked the friend . . . "Well, I think I can arrange that on board the ship," Davis replied. "It's going to Holland, eh? I think I'll go with you. Yes, I'll go" . . . "Very well," the friend stated. "I'll meet you at the pier tonight" . . . "Where's the pier?" asked Davis . . . "Hoboken," he was told . . . "Hoboken?" Davis repeated. "I thought the pier was in Manhattan. It's too much trouble getting to Hoboken. Thell with it—I won't sail."

LOCAL NEWS: Former Gov. George Earle, who still is Pennsylvania's leading Democrat, will get a Federal appointment . . . Contrary to all reports, Miriam Hopkins will not be a witness in the Bill Buckner case. Buckner's co-defendant, John Stuart Hyde, is on his way East now, after losing a battle to remain on the West Coast . . . The Rubel Brothers $427,000 robbery case will come to trial on June 17 . . . Two cops and an FBI man are guarding a famous Broadway restaurant, because of threats to blow it up . . . Because the "Pins and Needles" cast visited him in California last year, Tom Mooney will see that show here.

FINANCE DEPARTMENT: The other night 15 financial writers to New York newspapers were invited by RCA to visit the fair. They all dined at the Swedish Pavilion, where the bill was $140 . . . They paid and then proceeded to see Billy Rose's Aquacade . . . Because they had spent their ready cash, these expert financial writers tried to cash a $25 check at the Aquacade—and were refused.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR: "Although it's spring," writes Will Morrissey, "this is the turkey season for me, because I have already opened and closed my first Cuff Opera. It was on the morning when the ground hog decided to stay out of his hole that I got into mine . . . The first night the band walked out—so I played the show at the piano in those two keys I learned as a boy at the Brooke Avenue School of Music. The second night we lost the stagehands, but, bless them, they left the lights burning. Finally, after cables from Stalin and wires from Green, my crew walked out. So I called in Mr. Lewis' crew, and still put on a show. I called it a C. I. O. Revue, but it should have been called a C. I. O. U. Revue. Write me care of Any Empty Theater, Hollywood."

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, June 4 (INS).—Shakespeare's assumption that "the play's the thing" is open to discussion, according to Frank Freeman, Paramount boss, who has decided against filming "King Arthur and his Round Table," even though considerable money has been spent on research, scripting, etc. The studio chieftain's reason for turning down this epochal movie is because he cannot get a star of the caliber of Errol Flynn or Gary Cooper to play in it, which truly makes the name more important than the vehicle.

LOUELLA PARSONS

A smart business man is this young Freeman, who points out that the largest market for spectacles of medieval and ancient times is abroad and so must have stars of assured continental popularity. He added that Al Lewin might make "King Arthur" at another studio with stars whose luster is sufficient to draw the foreign markets. Para's other big special, a combination of "Gettysburg" and "The Copperhead" is not up for sale as rumored, according to Boss Freeman.

Hot or cold, stormy or sunshiny, Robert Taylor and Spencer Tracy will head for Nevada a week from Monday for "Northwest Passage." There's been so much chit chat that neither Bob nor Spence wanted to go on the location trip and make the picture that I questioned M-G-M. Wallace Beery, however, will be among the missing. That's because there's something else in store for him. So in his place will be that fine actor, Walter Brennan, borrowed from Samuel Goldwyn. I don't know where all of this talk started about Spence and Bob wanting to back out and not liking the story but it certainly has been a general topic of conversation at every dinner and tea party the last week.

Up until Saturday Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's generous offer for the film rights to C. S. Forrester's sea trilogy, "Beat to Quarters," "Ship of the Line," and "Flying Colors," had come to naught. Selected by the Book of the Month Club, these tangy adventures of Capt. Horatio Hornblower, now in one volume, have been compared to "Mutiny on the Bounty" and naturally M.-G.-M., with fond memories of that box-office smash, would love to get it for Spencer Tracy and Clark Gable. However, it isn't at all definite that Leo the Lion will walk away with the prize since Warners is said to have first claim to the seafaring best seller.

Romantic ins and out: Andrea Leeds and Pat De Cicco gave this reporter a busy evening at the Troc after the "Young Mr. Lincoln" preview. Gossip spread that they had eloped to Las Vegas and that Pat, who was once married to the ill-fated blonde beauty, Thelma Todd, had chartered a plane for his bride to be. The truth of the matter is that Pat did ask Andrea to elope and she for about five minutes considered it, but being a level-headed girl she decided to wait—so I reckon it's an engagement. Earlier in the day Madeleine Carroll sprang a divorce, Ena Gregory told us she planned to divorce Dr. Frank Nolan, and a cable from Merle Oberon in Antibes, Frances, said that she and Alexander Korda were just about to be married. How would you like to be a Hollywood reporter on your evening out—if you had one? Oh, yes, and I almost forgot the Bert Wheeler-Sally Haines legal parting which, when we first predicted it in this column, was so indignantly denied by them and a certain other columnist.

Errol Flynn is a good actor, but he isn't so sure that his skill on the screen is matched by his business prowess. He made two remarkable shorts of marlin fishing off Lower California with Howard Hill and sold them to Jack Warner. He says Jack out-talked him and got the best of the deal, but who won doesn't really matter for Errol's fishing reels are wonderful. One shows how he and Hill brought in a huge marlin with a bow and arrow and how, just in the nick of time, he and Hill jumped overboard before a giant swordfish speared their boat.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Zorina, battling flu, will not start her Warner engagement until she is entirely well; Regina Crewe heads for Hollywood with her husband, Herb Cruikshank, who has been very sick for many months; we'll all be glad to see Constance Talmadge when she arrives Thursday with her sister Norma; talked with Gwynne Pickford who tells me she is the happiest girl in the world and is hoping that Aunt Mary will send her blessing soon. She and Bud Ernst, her bridegroom, were trocing with a crowd of young people; put down to unusual night club sights, Rex Bell, Clara Bow's spouse, and Buck Jones, who were out for a night at the La Conga; the marathon dance contest at the Darryl Zanuck party at the Troc brought forth some magnificent prizes. Those who held lucky numbers and claimed a trophy included Sid Grauman and Cookie, Mack Gordon's pretty bride; sat next to Charles Boyer at the party and it was nice to hear him rave over Henry Fonda's Lincoln.

Varginia Bruce busy accepting congratulations on the victory of her thoroughbred, Big Ed, who raced home and paid $22.60. Virginia and her bridegroom, Jack Ruben, were lamenting they only had $10 on the nose. What an enraptured audience Marian Anderson had for her singing of the Ave Maria at the "Young Mr. Lincoln" preview. You could have heard a pin drop in the large theater. Her last number, a negro spiritual, tops anything I have ever heard.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Freddie to Inherit Estate in England

Freddie Bartholomew, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer boy star, will inherit Carlton Villa, ancestral home of the Bartholomew family for more than a hundred years in Warminster, Wiltshire, England. He was so informed by his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Bartholomew, 75 and 74 years old, respectively, who arrived this month for their first visit to their famous grandson in two years.

Damrosch Is Mystified by Hollywood

Famous Conductor Is Making Screen Debut In 'Star-Maker'

By Frederic C. Othman,
United Press Hollywood Correspondent.

Hollywood, June 4.—Having introduced Miss Linda Ware one dozen times, by actual count, to an audience which was paid to applaud enthusiastically, Dr. Walter Damrosch, dean of American orchestra conductors, patted his brow with a handkerchief today and said it was his studied opinion that Hollywood was a peculiar place.

The 77-year-old Dr. Damrosch is appearing before the sound cameras for the first time in his life, playing himself as the Carnegie Hall orchestra conductor in the picture, "The Starmaker." The longer he works, the more peculiar the place becomes.

"Mrs. Damroch and myself were getting ready to start our vacation a few weeks ago," he reported in Paramount's replica of Carnegie Hall. "We had even packed our bags for a leisurely trip to the West when I got a perfectly amazing telegram from Charles R. Rogers. He's the producer of the picture.

"He wanted me to become an actor with Mr. Bing Crosby and the Misses Louise Campbell and Linda Ware. Now this was a new experience to me, and since the emolument seemed adequate, Mrs. Damrosch and myself decided to take our vacation at the studio's expense."

Fat Salary Envelope

That is an understatement. Not only did Paramount pay Dr. Damrosch's expenses, but a reputed $20,000 for his two weeks in the sound stages.

"The things that happen keep me amazed and I might add, mystified," he said, while his 100-piece Symphony Orchestra rested after playing silently under his direction. "For instance, I never knew that cinema orchestras played once for sound, and again for eye. Nor did I realize the painstaking manner in which the technicians work.

"Consider my introducing Miss Ware 12 times from this stage. I had to do that, it seems, so it would be exactly right.

"As for the things that have mystified me, I might mention the fact that I was told it was of the greatest importance for me to appear every morning at 8 in a full dress suit. Now that in itself seems strange. But each day when I arrive, a young man smears me with an evil-smelling compound he calls make-up.

"Not only does he apply it liberally on my face, but all over my head as well. This is said to be necessary for pictorial purposes, even though it does make me appear as if I am suffering from yellow jaundice.

Mystified By Delay

"So after I am painted, I come onto the stage ready for work and then I sit on the set until 11 a. m., watching the electrician fellows scurry above on what I believe they call catwalks. I have yet to understand why it is necessary to spend my time observing them in their labors."

Dr. Damrosch said he never had had the good fortune to hear Mr. Crosby croon from the silver screen until after Rogers retained him as a movie actor.

"And then I went to the picture theater to hear Mr. Crosby," Dr. Damrosch continued. "What impressed me most about his performance was his remarkable diction. Every word he sang, no matter how silly a word it may have been, could be understood perfectly. That in itself is a real accomplishment. Other singers might well take some hints from Mr. Crosby."

Having thus neatly side-stepped the giving of his opinion of the art of crooning, Dr. Damrosch said one of the things which caused him to become a movie actor was the excellent voice of 14-year-old Miss Ware. He was a little leery about leading an orchestra to accompany her, until he heard her sing.

"Sings Beautifully"

"And she sings beautifully," he said. "She is another Hollywood phenomenon which amazes me."

By this time Director Roy Del Ruth had the extras in the theater arranged to suit him, the orchestra ready to play, and Miss Ware prepared to sing. So Dr. Damrosch had to end his interview—reluctantly, he said—and step upon the podium to conduct an aria from the Nutcracker Suite.

He waved his baton, and the musicians sawed, tootled, banged and plinked without a sound.

Miss Ware warbled as silently as the orchestra played. Only music in the place came from a loudspeaker, playing the recording all hands had made the day before.

When the performance was over, Miss Ware skipped across the stage and kissed Dr. Damrosch—still silently—upon the cheek. That was in the script.

Dr. Damrosch beamed. That wasn't in the script.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., June 4.—Twentieth Century-Fox has more pictures scheduled for technicolor than any other studio. Shirley Temple in "The Blue Bird," then "Lady Jane"—in fact, all of hers will be in color. "Maryland"—is that the old one where the heroine sways from the bell, but isn't saved by the gong? Last year they did "Kentucky." Gee, if we keep on at this rate, we'll have 46 more years to go, not counting the District of Columbia. "Drums Along the Mohawk," "Hollywood Cavalcade"—retitled, "Fallen Stars"—all are scheduled technicolor productions.

HOPPER

Now we have a new color process called Dunning. Mr. Dunning used to do all of our miniature glass shots, before each studio put in its own department. He offered just enough stock to build a new lab the other day and it was oversubscribed $100,000 in two hours.

But about color. As I've said before, only definite personalities can survive it. They even profit by it. But if you once see a star in color then her face looks flat in a black and white film. You don't know why and keep trying to find the answer. The answer is: They shouldn't put a star in color unless they intend to continue it.

That's why Zanuck is so smart about Shirley. After all, Mr. Disney seems to know what he was doing.

When you're not doing so well and leave town, you're brought back into a big part. That's what happened to Nana Bryant who's doing the Dorothy Thompson in "Career Man."

Karl Esmond was brought to this country by Metro, cooled his heels at $1,500 weekly for six months. Now he is back at the same place in "Thunder Afloat." Both Paramount and Twentieth Century are offering him a long-term contract. You may remember he played the handsome German flier in "Dawn Patrol."

I ran a story about glorifying the life of Edwin Booth and a few days later it was discovered that RKO had one. Since that time, Goldwyn, Paramount and Republic all want a look at the script.

And how about getting started on "Edison," now that we're having our fiftieth anniversary for films. He added more to the joy and comfort of our daily lives than any living man!

It looks as though those empty stores along Hollywood Boulevard will be prettied up by our Chamber of Commerce, so the place won't be so depressing to tourists. A swell idea if it happens.

Imagine Leo Carrillo being done in by a mule. It happened in "The Chicken Wagon Family." The mule wasn't supposed to talk back but every time they started the scene Carrillo got busy with his curry-comb. Not until the end of the day did they discover it was that and not Leo's jokes that tickled him and made him go "Hee, Haw!"

Did you know that Bob Montgomery was standing by to go on, without pay, in case Joe E. Brown missed his broadcast? I'd have paid money to see that switch!

Jane Withers gave Henry Wilcoxson her registered Hereford calf on the condition that he wouldn't barbecue it.

It's not beyond the reaches of the imagination that some day Canada may house the government of the British Empire. After all, it's larger than the United States with a population of 8,000,000. And no foreigners allowed.

Edgar Selwyn has had hundreds of letters wanting the job of Mr. Roosevelt in his picture, "A Call on the President." One man wrote, "I don't believe in the New Deal. But I wouldn't let my prejudices interfere with my performance."

There should be a place in that picture for Louise Dresser. She and Lillian were great friends and she looks wonderful!

Own Uniforms No Use in Beery Role

Those five new uniforms with the gold braid and insignia of a lieutenant commander in the United States Navy, which Wallace Beery had made this month, won't do him a bit of good in his forthcoming naval film role, the star learned to his dismay.

When the Navy Department in Washington, D. C., recently changed regulations for the uniforms, Beery had a new set made, which he hoped to wear both as a reserve officer in the Naval Air Corps and in his forthcoming role in "Thunder Afloat." He will play the role of an ensign who is courtmartialed and reduced to the rank of "gob."

*X WASHINGTON: MONDAY, JUNE 5, 1939 15

Harry Cooper Wins $5,000 Goodall Golf Title

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

St. Louis, Mo., June 4.—Any time the gentleman whose word is law in American League affairs decides to move the St. Louis Browns' franchise to some other city, it will be all right with seven of the eight club owners in the league. St. Louis for years has been a festering sore on the financial face of the league.

POVICH

For example, the other day the Philadelphia Athletics and the Browns played to only 487 paid customers and the A's share of the gate was insufficient to meet the club's hotel expenses for the day. A dead loss to the Philadelphia club that afternoon were the several hundred dollars it had spent for transportation here, and players' wages and other overhead expenses.

It's starvation baseball as far as the other clubs in the league are concerned. And of course the Browns aren't making any money, either. Those 487 who saw the game we mentioned were not a rare small crowd. Washington has played the Browns with fewer than 300 paying customers in the park, and today, at a Sunday double-header sponsored by the American Legion, there weren't 4,000 payees on the premises.

Club Owners Want to Move Browns

In fact, at a Saturday double-header a week ago, club officials announced the paid attendance as 1,789. When the Browns met the Tigers a few Sundays ago after their sensational ten-player deal, in which six Browns appeared in the uniforms of the Tigers for the first time, and four Tigers became members of the Browns, a crowd of 15,328 was present. But it took the first ten-player deal in history, on the eve of a Sunday game, to bring out the biggest crowd of the past 12 years at a Browns' home game.

If you don't think there is a clamor for the removal of the Browns' franchise to some other town, you haven't been listening closely to the moans of club officials all over the league. Owners of the other clubs are actually getting tough about it, and if they don't go to Baseball Commissioner Landis with their loud squawks at the next league meeting, then they are not to be believed, because that's what they say they will do.

The most depressing place on the baseball scene is Sportsman's Park when the Browns are playing at home oftentimes. This department on occasion has counted no more than 20 customers in the bleacher seats and the ushers and peanut butchers have outnumbered the box seat customers. The game actually loses face in St. Louis.

The reason, of course, is the pitiable record of the Browns for the past 15 years. They've alienated whatever support they did have. St. Louis, before 1926, used to be an American League town, with the Cardinals as inferior club. But with the Cardinals' first pennant victory in 1926, and the continued futility of the Browns, the National League has commanded the patronage here.

Club owners have been squawking for years at the financial raps they have been taking when their clubs visited St. Louis. And they have resented, too, the fact that the Browns, who provide no revenue at St. Louis, take down nice shares of the gate when they play in other cities. But not until this season have they made motions toward demanding that American League baseball get out of St. Louis.

Situation Has Become Critical

The reason is plain enough. In former years the league was able to carry St. Louis. The Browns represented virtually the only weak spot in the league's set-up, and hope was still held that the Browns could recapture some esteem in St. Louis. But with the Browns unimproved, and Chicago and Philadelphia also declining as sources of revenue in the American League, the situation has become critical.

The defection of Chicago as a good baseball town has become downright alarming. In a city of 2,000,000 potential fans, and with the White Sox one of the surprise clubs of the league this season, fewer than 1,500 persons paid to see the White Sox meet the Nats yesterday—on a Saturday. The Sox are losing money and are helping drag visiting clubs into the red.

At Philadelphia the situation is no better. Fewer than 10,000 fans were present to greet the opening of the season at Shibe Park in April. Every club but the Yankees take a rap when they play at Shibe Park.

Thus with Philadelphia and Chicago joining St. Louis as arid spots on the league's financial map, the sound and the fury of the club owners has increased. "Raus mit the Browns," is their cry, and they already have in mind the city they'd like to see replace St. Louis in the American League.

It would have to be a Western city, of course, to maintain the league balance of four Eastern and four Western clubs, and Milwaukee is the town they are favoring. Milwaukee fans are rabid, the city is big enough to support major league baseball, and there would be a saving in transportation costs by eliminating the expensive jumps to St. Louis.

They could move the Browns' franchise to Milwaukee simply by making a settlement with the owners of the Milwaukee American Association club. They wouldn't be violating any territorial rights of the American Association, either, because an existing contract, called the major-minor agreement, provides that any major league may draft a minor league city merely by meeting all financial claims.

Miss Cotter's Rocksie Wins Jump Honors

Clears Bar at 6 Feet 3 Inches to Defeat Black Caddy in Jump-Off in D. C. Show

By Anne Hagner

In one of the most thrilling jumping events in the history of local horse shows, Margaret Cotter's Rocksie took honors on the final day of the Washington show at Meadowbrook Club yesterday.

Rocksie and Fred Hughes, jr.'s Black Caddy jumped off four times, beginning with two fences set at 4 feet 3 inches and 4 feet 6 inches, respectively. Black Caddy refused and Rocksie pulled down the top pole to send the jumps up 6 inches at every jump off, ultimately going to 6 feet 3 inches.

As upward of 2,500 spectators yelled and screamed with excitement, Hughes' game black stallion finally refused the big fence and Miss Cotter's mount went clean to take the blue ribbon in the class, carrying out the prophecy made more than a month ago by Fenton Fadeley, well known local horseman, who said that the skyscraper class would go to 6 feet 3 inches if the ground was in good shape.

Second Victory

It was the second time in Miss Cotter's brilliant career that she has sent her great bay gelding over the highest fences ever seen locally. Last September in the Knights of Columbus show, Rocksie cleared an even 6 feet on the same grounds to win a similar class, jumping in deep mud.

Both horses were dripping wet after their high-climbing activities and exhausted from three days of continual jumping. Spectators rocked the grandstands as the awards were presented, realizing that they had witnessed a jumping exhibition such as is seldom seen anywhere.

The two friendly rivals did their jumping in spite of loud opposition from friends, relatives, and the worried manager of the show, Arthur Naul, who expected the worst and asked Miss Cotter and Hughes to accept a blue ribbon apiece and split the $50 prize money. They would hear nothing of this, however, and went on to make show-ring history.

Virginia Does Well

Although the two Washington-owned horses stole the show, it remained for the Virginia entries to do the tricolor winning. Mr. and Mrs. George P. Greenhalgh's Billy Do, after three days of consistent fencing, won two more blues in the final session to make him open jumper champion without a struggle. Reserve went to Billy's former owner, Capt. Henri Luebbermann, on the United States Government's Sandy.

Continuing Virginia's winning ways were the representatives of Mrs. John Hay Whitney's Llangollen Stables, who dominated their divisions among both working and conformation hunters.

Second in the way of spectator-interest was the bareback costume class, which was won by Fred Hughes' high-jumping horse in the guise of a zebra, replete with fake ears measuring more than a foot. Hughes painted wide white stripes on his mount with a secret compound and dressed himself as a Zulu warrior, to win the class by virtue of loud applause from the delighted spectators. Second was Lisbeth Stieg, accompanied by a dummy which was dressed in a replica of her own costume, that of the Gold Dust twins, and third was Mrs. Chip Robert, dressed as an Indian squaw. Fourth place went to Betty Couzens as a colored

Craig Wood Is Second, 3 Shots Back

Winner Finishes in Round-Robin Event With a Plus 31, Gains 10, Loses 6 in Finals

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 4.—Lighthorse Harry Cooper barely survived a severe attack of $1,000 jitters today to win the second annual Goodall round-robin golf tournament with a final score of plus 31 and a record of having lost only two of his 14 matches and gone over par only twice in seven rounds.

The veteran from Eastern Point, Conn., who thus moved into the front rank of favorites for next week-end's National Open championship, won by 2 points from Craig Wood, of Mamaroneck, N. Y. By the margin of two rimmed putts he escaped being sent into a play-off with the blond bomber.

Coming to the eighteenth green with a gallery of more than 1,000 trailing him, Cooper found himself 15 feet from the pin, with Ben Hogan and Jimmy Thomson less than 10 feet away. Wood already was in with his plus 29 score, and Hogan and Thomson combined were 5 up on Cooper.

$1,000 to Victor

That meant that Harry either had to halve the hole with both men or win it from one to finish on top. He lined up his putt and rolled the ball inches shy of the cup. His par 4 was safe. Then Thomson and Hogan strained Cooper's already frayed nerves by ramming their balls right to the cup, only to have them skip around the back edge and out again by inches.

The victory, worth $1,000 and a handsome trophy, was Cooper's first major triumph since the 1938 New Orleans Open, almost a year and a half ago. In the "future book" for the Open at Philadelphia it brought his odds down from 14 to 1 to 10 to 1, with the chances very strong that he will become second choice at 8 to 1 to Ralph Guldahl, defending champion and 6 -to-1 favorite. The meet starts Thursday.

Brilliant Finish

Wood put on a brilliant finish to take second money of $750. The handsome power-hitter, who also has been runner-up in the British Open, the P. G. A., and the Augusta masters, moved from sixth to third place with a morning 67, 3 under par, for a 13-point gain against Hogan and Denny Shute. In his final try he shot a handsome 71 to win nine holes from Olin Dutra and Paul Runyan.

Sam Snead, winner of last year's Inaugural at Cincinnati, again came up strong on the final day. A morning 70 and afternoon 69 boosted his score by 19 points and brought him into third place at plus 24. After him came Denny Shute, plus 21; Guldahl, the second-day leader, plus 19; Jimmy Hines, plus 11; Tony Penna, plus 9; Runyan, plus 1; Hogan, minus 4; Johnny Revolta, minus 11; Thomson and Metz, minus 12; Dutra, minus 33; Walter Hagen, minus 36, and Horton Smith, minus 38.

Cooper, never known for iron nerves under pressure, gave three definite signs he was feeling the strain. At the third, after lining up his putt, he walked all the way around in back of the hole to ask Thomson to move, and then missed the putt, and muttered bitterly about movie cameramen pursuing him after blowing short putts on the sixth and ninth.

The final point standings:

1, Harry Cooper, 31; 2, Craig Wood, 29; 3, Sammy Snead, 24; 4, Denny Shute, 21; 5, Ralph Guldahl, 19; 6, Jimmy Hines, 11; 7, Tony Penna, 9; 8, Paul Runyan, 1; 9, Benny Hogan, minus 4; 10, Johnny Revolta, minus 11; tie for eleventh between Jimmy Thomson and Dick Metz, minus 12 points; 12, Olin Dutra, minus 32; 14, Walter Hagen, minus 36; 15, Horton Smith, minus 38.

Today's results:

Sixth round (morning)—Wood defeated Shute, 4 up, and Hogan, 9 up; Shute defeated Hogan, 6 up; Runyan and Hagen, all even; Hagen and Penna, all even; Penna and Runyan, all even; Revolta defeated Guldahl, 1 up, and Hines, 3 up; Guldahl defeated Hines, 2 up; Snead defeated Metz, 2 up, and Thomson, 6 up; Metz defeated Thomson, 6 up; Cooper defeated Dutra, 4 up and Smith, 6 up; Dutra defeated Smith, 4 up.

Seventh round (afternoon)—Hines and Shute, all even; Shute defeated Smith, 3 up; Hines defeated Smith, 1 up; Revolta defeated Metz, 1 up, and Penna, 2 up; Metz defeated Penna, 1 up; Wood defeated Runyan, 5 up, and Dutra, 4 up; Dutra and Runyan, all even; Thomson defeated Cooper, 2 up; Hogan defeated Cooper, 3 up, and Thomson, 1 up; Snead defeated Guldahl, 4 up, and Hagen, 6 up; Guldahl defeated Hagen 1 up.

'Rufe' Watson North-South Skeet Victor

First Title of Career Won by Laurel Firer With 150 Straight

By Bill Burnett.

R. M. (Rufe) Watson, a 49-year-old businessman from Laurel, Md., for the first time in 20 years of skeet shooting heard himself called a champion yesterday when he defeated a former national champion for the crown in the sixth annual North-South Skeet Tournament at National Capital Skeet Club.

Watson, shooting with the host club's five-man team, the Senators, had a perfect score of 100x100 in the all-bore event to tie Dick Shaughnessy, of Dedham, Mass., and in the extra shoot he calmly cracked 50x50 to beat the Bay State High School lad's 49-50. The latter's downfall occurred when he shot slightly ahead of the incomer on No. 5.

It was Watson's first major skeet tournament victory, and well he deserved it. Without a trace of nerves, and firing methodically, the auto sales company owner defeated the 17-year-old Shaughnessy in the most important event of the two-day meet.

For Shaughnessy, however, his loss to Watson was no disgrace. A national champion at 15, and having poured shot at the clay birds since he was 12, his defeat was at the hands of an older and steadier shooter. He took most of the honors, despite the all-bore beating, winning the high-over-all with 294x300, the .410 bore on Saturday with 96x100, and the 20-gauge individual the same day with 98x100.

Crescent League Officially Disbands

The Capitol Crescent Baseball League was officially disbanded Saturday night when President Earl Blondheim, of the Ida's Department nine, divided the league's funds and announced that action was suspended.

Wes Ferrell Says He's O. K.

Former Nat Dickers With Coast Club

Greensboro, N. C., June 4 (AP).—Wes Ferrell, pitcher released recently by the New York Yankees, said today he planned to continue in professional baseball.

Ferrell said he had been dickering with the Hollywood club of the Pacific Coast League and that he expected "something definite" shortly.

"I haven't talked to any major league club official, yet," he said, "but I'm going to work out here at home and when my arm feels O.K. I'll get in touch with some people.

"If the arm doesn't feel all right then there's no use trying to fool anyone, including myself."

German Net Team Winner

Sweeps Matches 3 With Britishers

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, June 4.—Germany eliminated England from Davis Cup competition today when the Reich's doubles team of Heinrich Henkel and Georges Metaxa defeated Shaffi and Wilde in straight sets, 6—4, 6—2, 6—2.

The victory which the Germans won in impressive fashion gave them a clean sweep in the first three matches.

Yesterday Charles Hare forfeited to Roderick Menzel because of a leg injury and Henkel defeated R. A. Shayes in the opening singles matches.

Germany will play the winner of the Yugoslavia-Belgium matches next month in the European finals.

The British team sorely missed Capt. Hare. Shaffi substituted for him and while he tried valiantly he and Wilde could not match the strength and co-ordination of the Germans.

Yugoslavia Beaten In Upset by Belgium

Zagreb, Yugoslavia, June 4 (AP).—Belgium upset Yugoslavia today in doubles, but trailed two matches to one in their third round Davis Cup tennis play.

Leopold Lacroix and his partner De Borman defeated Ferenc Puncec and Dimitri Mitic, 6—2, 6—2, 6—3, today after the team lost both opening singles matches yesterday.

Lou Fette, of Bees, Weds Teacher

Boston, June 4 (INS).—Lou Fette, 32, ace right hander of the Boston Bees, was married tonight to Lucille Greer, 23, Alma, (Mo.), school teacher, in the vestry of the Brookline Baptist Church.

Danny MacFayden, teammate of the bridegroom, and Mrs. MacFayden were the only attendants. MacFayden was pinchhitting for Fetter's roommate, Pitcher Jim Turner, who was hospitalized.

Browns Beat Nationals In Twin Bill, 5-4, 11-3

Washington Perilously Close to Cellar After St. Louis Halts 11-Game Losing Streak At Their Expense; Chase, Kelly Lose Opener

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

St. Louis, June 4.—Baseball's last measure of ignominy—a double-header defeat by the St. Louis Browns, overtook the hapless Nats this afternoon. And tonight, after succeeding only in breaking the Browns' 11-game losing streak, the Washington Club was periously close to the American League cellar.

The Nats broke the Browns losing streak by dropping a 5-4 decision in the opening game, but in the second game the Griffs hit a new low, taking an 11-3 beating. Coincidentally the Nats were collecting their third and fourth consecutive defeats.

That first game was pitched away by Ken Chase and Harry Kelley in the eighth inning when a 3-1 lead of the Nats disappeared under the weight of three bases on balls and three hits yielded by Chase and Kelley. Harlond Clift drove in the tying and winning runs after Chase had filled the bases.

Jimmy DeShong gave valiant battle to Vernon Kennedy in the second game, but was forced out for a pinch hitter in the eighth inning, with the Nats trailing, 5-3. Whereupon the Browns completed the carnage by whaling young Walter Masterson for six hits and six runs in the eighth.

Three home runs by the Nats during the afternoon were futile. Taft Wright and Buddy Lewis pounded out homers in the first game, and Case slugged a useless homer in the second, but 27 St. Louis hits of various dimensions during the day offset the effects of the Nats' distance drives.

In that second game, George Case followed his homer with a fifth-inning double to tie the score at 3-3, but from that point, the Browns took command. They went into a 4-3 lead in the same inning after Hoag led off with a triple, and in the seventh, McQuinn's double and Clift's single upped their lead 5 to 3.

Pretty Tragic

Those were the figures when Rookie Masterson got the pitching job in the eighth. Before he could get three out, the Browns had six more runs on a pair of bases on balls, a single by Hoag, a triple by McQuinn, singles by Clift and Sullivan, Glenn's double, and another single by Heffner. It was pretty tragic for young Masterson.

Kennedy, the former Tiger, yielded ten hits to the Nats, but surrendered no runs after the fifth inning.

The Nats made motions as if to win that first game a la the New York Yankees. Taft Wright hammered a homer into the rightfield roof in the second inning—his first of the season—and in the third, after George Case had beaten out a bunt, Lewis dropped a home run drive onto the same roof to set Washington up in a 3-0 lead.

Lose Their Punch

They packed six of their ten hits of the game into the first three innings against Jack Kramer in the last seven innings they had no such punch. But those three runs appeared sufficient, what with Ken Chase moving along nicely.

For seven innings Chase allowed only one run—in the fifth when

Matthews Beats Kay, 6–2, 6–4, in Junior Singles

With singles play having reached the final round yesterday as Byron Matthews defeated David Kay, 6—2, 6—4, for the right to meet Harry Brinkerhoff Tuesday for the crown, junior doubles will move into that advance stage at Columbia this afternoon.

In matches starting at 4 o'clock, Ben Fisher and Dick Mayfield meet Eddie Richardson and Maurice Cowan, and while Slater Clarke and Buddy Edwards engage Dave Kay and Milton Freer. Both teams are unseeded and each eliminated one of the seeded combinations en route to the semifinals.

In a double-barreled upset Saturday, Clarke and Edwards defeated top-seeded Tom Wadden and Byron Matthews, and Fisher and Mayfield paired to remove second-seeded Reggie Cooper and Taylor Chewning.

Matthews' victory over Kay in the semifinal round of the singles was scored with surprising decisiveness as Kay, who had early eliminated top-ranked Len Sokol seemed powerless in the face of his foe's fast attack.

Archibald, Silva Fight Tonight at Stadium

10-Round Nontitle Contest Expected To Attract 6,000 Fans

By Al Hailey

With the Weather Man promising clear skies, the curtain will rise tonight at 8:30 o'clock at Griffith Stadium on an action-filled fistic drama bringing together Joey Archibald, world's featherweight champion, and Mexican Joe Silva in a 10-round nontitle fight.

The champion arrived from New York yesterday under the wing of Manager Al Weill, who announced Archibald is in "perfect condition" and expects to make Silva No. 11 on his local knockout list.

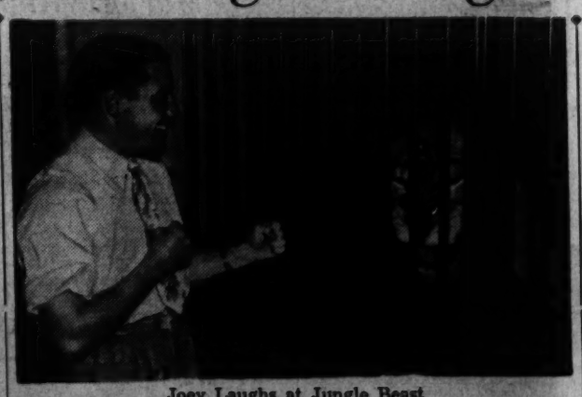
Promising enough excitement to make Washington fight fans lung weary before the night begins to age, the card is expected to draw around 6,000 fans, according to optimistic estimates by Promoter Joe Turner and Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn, who spent most of last night in a huddle muttering strange incantations designed to put the hex on rain clouds.



Joey Laughs at Jungle Beast

Although a slight underdog in betting odds, Silva will have added inspiration when he steps in the ring against Archibald. The Mexican boy's blond wife, who has never seen him fight, will be at the ringside.

If Silva can take the knockout punch Archibald has exhibited on numerous occasions, he may be expected to wade through the ten rounds to a decision, making quite a mess of the champion in such an eventuality.

The crosseyed Mexican fighter moves forward continuously, throwing both fists. In his recent defeat of Al Reid, New York ranking featherweight, Silva left Reid's face and body raw from the ceaseless cutting of his blows. At the same time he showed an ability to take the hard punches on the jaw when he threw skill to the winds and allowed Reid to step in and hit him with all he had—which, however, is not as much as the hard hitting Providence fighter can offer.

The pre-fight talk gives Silva everything to gain by a victory—a rise to the No. 2 title contender's spot, a possible fight with Lightweight Champion Henry Armstrong.

Champ Slight Choice Over Mexican Boxer; Good Supporting Card

Young Star Allows But Six Hits; Veteran Gives Up Only Seven

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, June 4.—Bob Feller and Lefty Grove each won ball games today as the Cleveland Indians captured the first of a double-header from the Boston Red Sox, 10 to 2, and then surrendered, 7 to 1, in the nightcap.

Feller gave up six hits in the opener for his ninth victory of the year while his teammates were rapping Jim Bagby and Jake Wade for 15 safe blows.

Grove allowed seven hits, dueling on even terms with Willis Hudlin until the seventh frame of the finale, when the Cleveland "iron man" was removed for a pinch hitter. Then the Sox got to Tom Drake and Johnny Humphries for five

U. S. Beats British in First Game of International Polo, 11-7

Aidan Roark, Englishman, Hurt in Spill

Knocked Unconscious But Returns to Game After Few Minutes; Play Again Sunday

By Bob Considine.

Westbury, N. Y., June 4.—Yankee Doodle went to town here today—a riding on a polo pony.

The American polo squad, perhaps the greatest combination in the century old history of the sport, put to rout Britain's best in the first game of a three-contest battle for the ancient international polo challenge cup. The score was 11-7, but it hardly indicates the superiority of the Americans' mounts, team play and individual skill.

Only three of the Britons' seven goals actually were earned, the remaining four coming from free shots given to them by the officials after the hard-riding Americans had roughly collided with the invaders.

Roark Injured

Aidan Roark, brother of the famed British player who was killed last February in Los Angeles while training for the international series, narrowly escaped serious injury in the violent second chukker. He cut in front of the onrushing pony of Millionaire Mike Phipps and was hit so hard that it spun him through the air. He hit the green turf of International Feld so hard that he rolled over two or three times, his mallet dangling wildly from his wrist.

He was knocked unconscious but returned to the game within 10 minutes. His injuries are confined to a badly bruised left shoulder and shock, and he will be able to play next Sunday when the second contest of the series is played.

Take Early Lead

America was off to a 2-0 lead in less than two minutes after the start of the game, and before many of the crowd of 18,000 were in the sky-blue grandstands. Winston Guest was the first to score, rocketing the wooden egg through the gayly-painted uprights after a throw-in. A moment later Tommy Hitchcock, who has been beating the British since 1921, made it 2-0 by charging into a wilderness of flying mallets and straining horseflesh, "stealing" the ball and poking it through the British goal.

The injury to Roark seemed to work the Britons into a fighting fury, for by the middle of the third chukker they had tied the score 3-3, with two free shots and a nice goal by Bob Skene, off a good feeding shot from Roark.

100-Yard Pass

But the American team was hardly fit to be tied. With three quick thrusts that left the British gasping the native players zoomed to 6-3, the most dramatic moment of the spurt coming when Stewart Iglehart smacked a 100-yard pass to Phipps, who, standing like an Indian sentry between the British goal posts, received the ball and poked it through.

But as the clubs swept toward the end of the fourth chukker the English turned on their best heat. Gathering up the edges of their ragged team play they scored twice—led once again by the Australian Skene. They missed another free shot that would have given them a 6-6 tie.

That was their end. Throughout the last half of the game it was hardly a contest. Doing everything better, and mounted on ponies that seemed as much faster than the expensive British mounts than a thoroughbred is faster than a policeman's horse, the Americans thundered on to 10-5 in the seventh chukker, paced by Hitchcock's terrific hitting and the inspired team play of Iglehart—who owes his place on the team to the fact that Cecil Smith was hurt while training.

Ex-Notre Dame Football Star Dies Of Tuberculosis

Tucson, Ariz., June 4 (AP).—Eddie Collins, 33, leftend on Knute Rockne's Notre Dame football teams in 1928 and 1929, died in a sanatorium today after a valiant nine-year fight against tuberculosis.

An improvement had been reported recently and there was hope for his recovery.

Charley Hit on Finger By Line Drive in 8th; Detroit Turned Back

By the Associated Press

Detroit, June 4.—A finger injury prevented big Charley Ruffing from pitching the full route, but he got credit for his eighth victory of the season today as the New York Yankees downed the Detroit Tigers, 8 to 4, before a crowd of 44,190.

Ruffing, who limited the Tigers to six hits, was hurt while catching a line drive from the bat of Barney McCosky in the fifth inning. He walked from the hill after George Tebbetts led off with a single in the Tiger eighth, and Johnny Murphy finished, holding Detroit hitless.

The Yankees were opportunists as they scored once in the second inning and twice in each of the next three frames on a total of only nine hits. The final run in the eighth also came with the aid of a long single.

Paul Trout started for Detroit and was relieved in the fourth by Archie McKain. The latter gave way to a pinch hitter in the seventh, and Luther Thomas finished. The Yankees piled up 11 hits with Red Rolfe's fourth inning double the lone extra base blow.

Macks Rally, Win Nightcap; Lose Opener

Chisox Take First Game, 14-9; A's Win Second by 11 to 6

Chicago, June 4 (INS).—The White Sox and Athletics divided the double-header today.

The Sox grabbed the opener with eight runs in the first inning and then coasting to a 14-9 triumph and the A's followed that procedure to win the nightcap just as handily, 11 to 6.

The A's got 30 of those safeties, 15 in each tilt. Play was also pretty loose with a total of nine errors committed and the A's had a slight 5-4 edge there, too.

Rex Mays Takes State Fair Race

Milwaukee, June 4 (AP).—Rex Mays, who was forced out of the Indianapolis Memorial Day automobile race with a blown piston at 362 miles, came back today to win the 25-mile feature race on a mile dirt track at Wisconsin State Fair Park.

The Glendale (Calif.) driver also won an 8-mile race. Ted Horn, of Los Angeles, fourth at Indianapolis, finished second to Mays in the 25-mile and in taking places on the six-race program.

Man of the Month

(Following each game by The Washington Club, Walter Johnson distributes among the Nats ten points of merit, based on their performances for the day. At the end of each month, the Washington player boasting the greatest number of points is designated as the Nats' "Man of the Month" and receives a trophy from The Washington Post.)

By Walter Johnson.

(WJSV-General Mills Broadcaster.)

Man of the Month points are distributed as follows on the basis of the Nats' double-header performance at St. Louis yesterday:

To George Case, five points, because he made two hits in the first game, and because he hit a homer and a double in the second.

To Buddy Lewis, four points, because he hit a homer with two on in the first game, and a single in the second.

To Taft Wright, three points, because he hit a homer and a single in the first game and a single in the second.

To Sammy West, three points, because he made three of the Nats' hits, including a double, in the first game.

To Bobby Estalella, two points, because he doubled in the second game and played a brilliant game in the field.

To Rick Ferrell, two points, because he made two important singles in the second game.

West	9	Gelbert	2
Wright	8	Kelley	2
Case	8	Ferrell	2
Estalella	7	Travis	1
Lewis	5	Myer	1

Cubs Defeat Phils, 9 to 4; Second Called

Sunday Law Halts Nightcap in 4th With Dizzy Dean Ahead, 2-0

Philadelphia, June 4.—The Chicago Cubs beat the Phillies 9 to 4 today and were out in front, 2 to 0, behind Dizzy Dean, when the second game was called in the fourth inning because of the law banning Sunday play after 6 o'clock (E. S. T.)

While the Cubs hustled in a futile attempt to complete the five innings necessary for the nightcap to go down on the record books, the Phils played casually.

Wet grounds delayed the start of the opener. Then the Cubs pummeled Hugh Mulcahy for six runs in the first three innings and added three more in the ninth by getting to Walter Beck who relieved Mulcahy in the third.

The Phils were unable to solve the offerings of Jack Russell who went in for big Bill Lee in the fourth, after the latter had been touched for three runs in the third frame and yielded another in the fourth.

Silva, Archibald To Fight Tonight

and probably an Enropean trip to meet Peter Kane, Great Britain's world's flyweight champion.

Archibald, while not risking his title, would be put in an embarrassing spot and probably would be forced into a return match with the title at stake if he loses tonight.

Must Weigh 127

Well liked by Washington fans, who saw him rise from a $50 preliminary role to the world's featherweight championship, Archibald has 10 knockouts over 14 opponents he has fought in Washington.

He gained the title by his recent defeat of Leo Rodak, who is now rated No. 2, behind Pete Scalzo. Silva has a chance to take Rodak's spot tonight.

Laken has passed up several fights for Silva in the eight weeks since the Al Reid encounter here to make certain the Mexican fighter will have every physical advantage tonight. Silva must weigh in at 127 pounds today at 2 p. m. at the District Boxing Commission, under terms of the over-the-weight agreement. Archibald, several inches shorter than the Mexican, probably will weigh in around 124 pounds.

When the two step into the ring, it should be a fight no one will want to stay away from. It will be a match between Archibald's punching power and Silva's perpetual motion fists.

The preliminary card promises enough action to whet appetites for the main dish. Frankie Wills, victorious in 13 of his last 15 fights, meets Red Osborne, also a local boy, in one six-rounder, and Sammy Chivas, Detroit, meets Carl Dell, Archibald's stablemate, in another.

Jackie Carter, Silva's stablemate, meets Lee Rosen, of Baltimore, and Al Hart, colored heavyweight, meets Panama Joe Walker in four-rounders.

Pirates Beat Dodgers, 7-3; Lose, 14-1

Rizzo's Homer Wins Opener for Pittsburgh; Casey Holds Bucs in 2d

New York, June 4 (INS).—After dropping the first game of a double-header, 7 to 3, the Brooklyn Dodgers came back to overwhelm the Pittsburgh Pirates, 14 to 1, before a crowd of 24,257 fans.

The Dodgers were held runless only in the second and fourth innings of the nightcap. They scored two in the first, one in the third, two in the fifth, three in the sixth, one in the seventh and five in the eighth. They drove out 19 hits. Klinger, who gave way to Heintzelman, was tagged with the loss. Hugh Casey pitched the route for Brooklyn.

Pittsburgh took the first game as Jim Tobin let the Dodgers down with eight hits. Johnny Rizzo homered for the Pirates with two on base in the eighth inning.

Ralph Bogart Wins School Title Over Earl Skinker, 6 and 4

Willett's Ace Is Feature In Morning

Bogart Wins Easily Over Skinker After Willett Goes 3 Up; Vass Beaten, 2 and 1

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

The suspicion that Ralph Bogart, Wilson High's 19-year-old golfer is the best schoolboy linksman in town was confirmed yesterday at Washington Golf and Country Club when a schoolmate Earl Skinker, proved no match in the finals of the District Scholastic Championship, losing 6 and 4.

There was some doubt in the mind of Bogart himself in the morning semifinals when he watched Carroll Willett, 15-year-old Kenwood caddy, from Bethesda High, start with a birdie, then drop a hole-in-one on the second hole, and a par on the third for a 3-up lead.

But Bogart squared the match at the ninth, and was one under par for six holes of the back nine as he won, 4 and 2. Willett's tee shot on the second hole was on line all the way, but appeared several inches short as they looked at the ball from the tee. But on reaching the green it was right against the pin, and when they pulled the stick out the ball dropped, for an ace and the accompanying awards. The hole is 186 yards.

Medalist Down

Meanwhile Medalist Skinker was 2 down and 7 to play against George Vass but won four holes in succession and the match on the seventeenth, 2 and 1.

Frank X. Emmett, who saved the tournament for the boys in last-minute fashion last week and then drew a near-record entry in one day, presented The Washington Post Trophy to Bogart for a year's possession, and a replica to be held permanently. Emmett gave Skinker medalist and runner-up trophies. It was the sixth annual event, under Emmett's direction.

The final match found Skinker off his game for the first time in the tourney, after a rain-soaked, medal-winning 76 Friday, a one-over par performance during Saturday's two rounds at Manor, and a good score against Vass in the morning.

Bogart won the second hole with a par when Skinker was trapped from the tee and out of bounds with his second. His lead jumped to four up on the sixth hole as Skinker was in traps, woods and all-round trouble, and the knobby-haired runner-up won his first and only hole on the seventh with a par.

Bogart Closes Match

They halved four in a row, three of them over par, and then Bogart rapped in three pars in a row as Skinker, his two chip shots short and missed the fourteenth green, as Bogart closed the match, 6 and 4.

Wilson High was assured of the trophy as both boys are representatives of the Nebraska avenue school. They did not compete in the high school series until the second half, due to the ineligibility, and the team finished behind Roosevelt.

Bogart is Army and Navy Club champion, while Skinker won the Columbia Club junior championship last year.

If precedent is followed, Bogart is due for a major sectional title or two this summer, as all the other winners of The Post Trophy, Frank Allan, Billy Shea, Bobby Brownell and Buddy Sharkey, followed it up with impressive performances that stamped them as the topnotch younger players of the city.

Overton, Barnes Win 4-Ball Title

Baltimore, June 4.—Spencer Overton and E. G. Barnes routed Ernie Caldwell and Gene Bruning, 5 and 4, in the finals of the Maryland State Golf Association four-ball championship in the all-Rolling Road final here today.

They succeed Elliott Spicer and Roy Sasscer Indian Spring's champions of 1938. It was the second year in succession the finals have been a one-club battle.

Secret Service Man Shoots Perfect Score

John Cash Posts 300 In International Pistol Tourney

Philadelphia, Pa., June 4.—Three new champions were crowned, two others retained their titles, two marks were established and three others equaled in the Record's third international police pistol shoot which came to a close today at the S Davis Wilson Range.

The two-day tournament which brought 67 five-man teams and 123 individual contestants from all sections of the country, produced a perfect shooter.

John J. Cash, member of the White House police, from the office of the Secret Service, won the individual championship by turning in a perfect 300 score.

Unnoticed in the field of star pistol shots, Cash, a former newspaper man, who joined the Secret Service six years ago, blasted his perfect score in a pouring rain to break the old individual scoring record of 299 made by Arthur V. Sackett, New York City Police, in winning the title last year.

Cash, one of the White House policeman appointed to guard King George and Queen Elizabeth of England, when they visit Washington, hit the targets for 100 scores in each of his "slow fire" and "timed fire" events at 25 yards and "rapid fire" events at 15 yards.

Washington Club Title to Fowler; McCarthy-Miller Duo Is Winner

Parks-Francis Bow In Cummings Play At Columbia Club

Ralph S. Fowler won the Washington Golf and Country Club championship yesterday for the second time in four years, taking an early lead and coasting to a 7 and 6 victory over Capt. E. Y. Argo, who came to the club from Texas several months ago.

Fowler, golf committee chairman of the club, won the first three holes against Argo, held the advantage at the ninth and had a five-up lead at the end of the morning 18, with a four over par 74.

He picked up three more holes on Argo with a 37 on the first nine of the afternoon round, and had his margin cut one hole before ending the match on the twelfth green, 7 and 6. It was the third one-sided triumph in the last three years. Fowler was runner-up in 1937.

Washington's club tourney is the first to be concluded this year. With the exception of Chevy Chase, the others are fall events.

J. B. Heron won the second flight over R. T. Harrell, 1 up; D. E. Lee defeated A. G. Dezendorf in the third flight finals, 4 and 3, and G. B. Shepard won the fourth over W. H. Phillips, 2 up.

COLUMBIA

The Cummings Cup, the two-man team trophy of the Columbia Club members, went to George Miller and Martin McCarthy yesterday with one of the lowest best-ball rounds in the tourney in years, a 66, that accounted for Capt. F. Parks and Maj. J. H. Francis, 3 and 2.

The two duos had advanced to the title round last week with the two lowest medal scores, and succeed Maury Nee and Robert Finkenstaedt as champions. The latter team was broken up as Finkenstaedt is out of town.

The McCarthy-Miller duo won the ninth hole with a par four to take a one-up lead, and then fired a best ball of 30, five under par, on the back nine to win 3 and 2. After halving the first three holes in fours, the new champions deuced the thirteenth, followed with a pair of fours and settled the issue on the sixteenth with another birdie deuce. They played the round out and finished with birdies for 30 and 66.

Col. and Mrs. G. E. Stratemeyer won low gross in the mixed Scotch foursome, with a 39-40—79, while net prizes went to Mrs. B. G. Simpich and Martin R. West, club president, 88-17—71; Mr. and Mrs. Barney Giles, 88-16—72, and Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Fisher, 102-30—72.

Miller and McCarthy will have to defend their title in the fall, against the challange of the top teams in the club.

EAST POTOMAC

Eddie Meyer, amateur partner of Johnny Bass, Clifton Park pro, fired six consecutive threes over the East Potomac B and D courses yesterday as he and Bass defeated Mel Shorey and Tommy Doerer, 2½ points to a ½, but the Baltimoreans bowed to the locals in the team match, 18 to 9.

Shorey and Doerer were two up and two to play on the first nine when Meyer dropped putts for birdies on 8 and 9 to even the match. He followed with four in a row on the back nine, for a birdie, eagle and two pars. Meyer scored a 73 with an eight on a par five. He played Mount Pleasant in 62 strokes Saturday, in an informal round.

The remainder of the local public links team was stronger than the visitors, and had little trouble in doubling the score.

G. Robinson, one-armed member of the hosts, played the course in 87 strokes, two shots lower than G. L. Anderson, one-armed linksman from Clifton Park. Robinson and V. O. Kanable won three points from Anderson and C. W. Purcel.

Jhn Bass and Eddie Meyer (Clifton) defeated Mel Shorey and Tomy Doerer, 2½ points to ½; Bobby Burton and Jock Micker (East Potomac) scored 2 points to 1 for Mike Ferryman and Luther Madison; G. Possum and Jack Harris (East Potomac) scored 3 points to 0 for Fred Koenig and Henry Eser; Gerald Edwards and Charles Picco (East Potomac) scored 2 points to 1 for Joe Vaeth and Charles Emsler; Earl Marcy and Lew Spangler (East Potomac) scored 3 points to 0 for Mike Peterson and Dr. P. Virgillo; Robert Parker and E. W. McGee (Clifton) scored 3 points to 0 for W. Lines and J. O. Riley; Leon Cole and Jimmy Leach (East Potomac) scored 2 points to 1 for Lyn Lovett and Earl Mather; Joe Bailey and Joe Pound (East Potomac) scored 2½ to ½ for Joe Silver and Mike V'Arcifrete; Arthur Robinson (East Potomac) and V. O. Kanable (East Potomac) defeated G. L. Anderson and C. W. Purcell.

MANOR

The new tees were put into use at Manor for the first time yesterday, lengthening the first nine nearly 200 yards and Golf Committee Chairman Harry G. Pitt celebrated with a 69, one under par, with a 32 in the woods and 37 on the out nine.

Pitt's score gave him a four-stroke edge at the halfway mark of the club ladder qualifications, with 73's each by the former two-man team champions, Tom Corwin and Walter Talkes, in second place.

J. C. Putnam and Dick Meyer were still in the running for the top rung with 74's, while Ralph Gibson, greens chairman, played the lengthened layout in 75.

INDIAN SPRING

A. S. "Dick" Melvin is the new Dr. A. T. Utz trophy champion at Indian Spring, playing the course in 70, 1 under par, and taking off a five handicap for a 65. Melvin was out in 37, two over par, but played the tougher back nine in 33, three under, for the sub-par score.

Two tied for second in the tournament, honoring Dr. Utz, charter member of the club and a member of the board of governors, J. G. Cooper had 89, 22—67, and A. G. Abbott, 23, 16—67.

CONGRESSIONAL

D. C. Cooper and George Hill tied with net 68's in the sweepstakes event at Congressional, Cooper scoring 88, 20—68, and Hill 85, 17—68. George Neville was third with 81, 11—70.

F. E. Berquist defeated E. B. Collins in the Class B finals of the handicap match play championship, while Class C went to G. A. Hathaway, who defeated Myron Davy, 2 and 1.

Wiffy Cox, Congressional mentor, will leave for Spring Mill Course, Philadelphia, Tuesday morning for the Open championship that starts Thursday. He intends to play the course twice in practice rounds.

KENWOOD

Kenwood's Sweepstakes tourney, with a 2/3 handicap allowance, went to O. C. Pooge, with 84, 15—69. J. W. Harvey was in the prize list again with 76, 4—72, while two tied for third, Thomas Powers, 83, 10—73, and Charles L. Vaile, 78, 5—73.

ARGYLE

Mrs. Malcom Halliday and Nolan Gibson won low gross in the mixed-Scotch foursome costume tourney at Argyle, with a 43 for nine holes.

Two tied for second, Mrs. Richard Mothershead and Dr. Perrin, 46, and Mrs. Evelyn Scoggins and Richard Mothershead, 46. Mrs. Al LaBonte and Ralph Lillibridge had 47, while Mrs. Lillibridge was also in the prize list, with southpaw Charles Sutphin for a partner, with 49.

Costume winners were Mrs. Ed Widmayer, women's chairman; Mrs. Shirley Chamblin, Malcon Halliday and E. B. Johnson.

BEAVER DAM

Robert Mills won the Marmion trophy playoff over A. M. Woodside at Beaver Dam, scoring 79 to Woodside's 80. They each had 10 handicaps and tied with net 70's in the original play.

Eddie Bean and R. K. Thompson tied in the first flight of the match play against par event, each beating perfect figures 2 up, while Joe Balestri and G. F. Stringer were each 1 up.

Second flight winners were R. C. Mitchell, 4 up; Pat Fogarty and H. J. Stevens, one up, and C. E. Purdy even. Dr. M. M. McLean finished five up, with J. B. Robinsin 3 up, A. C. Keefer 2 up and J. McGeever, even. E. H. Manders, 4 up, and P. M. Miller, even, were fourth-flight winners.

WOODMONT

Howard Nordlinger won the handicap match play championship at Woodmont again, defeating E. Melniker in the finals, 3 and 1. M. Gewirz advanced to the second flight with a one-up triumph over George Jacobson and will meet Ner Bord, winner by default.

ARMY AND NAVY

J. H. Haws and W. E. Doyle finished in a two-way deadlock in the Blind Bogey play at Army and Navy, scoring 101-22, 79, and 97-18, 79, respectively. Maj. T. C. Browne, 91-20, 71, was third and N. D. Hathaway, 97-22, 75, and F. M. Elliott, 89-14, 75, completed the prize list.

The Service Club women golfers compete in the Peabody Trophy Play today.

ANACOSTIA

Jim Gipe's sub-par 36 hole total of 135, from rounds of 67-68, easily won medal honors in the Anacostia tournament for the Walter Hagen Trophy. Match play will start tomorrow, according to Manager Harry Graham.

CAPITAL

Bill Alexander and H. O. Kephart scored the major upset in the first round of the Barry Pate two-man team play at Capital, winning over Billy Houghton and Ed Fox, 5 and 4.

Dr. L. J. Salen and F. O. Roth defeated H. E. Deel and N. Thornton, 1 up, 19 holes; George Borsari and T. G. Herbert defeated C. T. Gibson and B. Merstik, 5 and 4; George Molloy and C. J. Royal Giants Beat Norfolk, 24-5 and 8-3

Winners Score 13 Runs In First Two Innings Of First Game

The Royal Giants annexed a double-header yesterday at Griffith Stadium before a crowd of 2,000, defeating the Norfolk Tars, 24 to 5 and 8 to 3.

They jumped on Watson for a 13-run getaway in the first and second innings of the opener and treated Williams, who succeeded him, with no more respect after solving his delivery.

The nightcap looked like a pitcher's duel at the outset, Johnson and Joyner both appearing in unusually good form, but the hard-hitting Royals ran Johnson from the box in the third, gathering 5 runs, and put the game on ice.

Golfer Has Walked 28,000 Miles or More

Brighton, England.—Reginald Amos, professional at the Duke Golf Club, has kept a log of his journeys about the course during ten years residence. His figures show he has walked 28,000 miles over tees, fairways and greens. He was unable to estimate officially the number of detour miles he made into the rough and the woods.

London Likely To Be Awarded 1944 Olympics

International Games Committee Will Meet Tomorrow in London

By Scotty Reston,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

London, June 4.—The 1944 Olympic games were expected to be awarded to London this week as 40 members of the international Olympic Committee arrived today to consider bids of four major cities.

Others bidding for the thirteenth Olympiad are Detroit, Rome and Lausanne, Switzerland.

Olympic committee members will meet Tuesday evening. The Duke of Gloucester will greet them at St. James' Palace.

London last held the games in 1908, but British Olympic officials point out that even then they were forced to take them over on short notice.

It is possible that a fight for the games may develop between Rome and London. Rome originally was scheduled to get the 1940 games before they were awarded to Japan. The Italian committee, however, gave them up, and did not bid for them again when the Sino-Japanese war forced Japan to turn them over to Finland.

Because of this series of events, Italian officials believe they are entitled to the games.

Most Olympic officials oppose giving the games to Rome because, they say, the Olympics have been tangled up in international politics since before the Berlin games in 1936. The tendency now is not to give them to any country which may use the games to publicize the authoritarian state.

Detroit's position is weakened by the fact that the games were held in Los Angeles in 1932, though United States Olympic officials recall that Athens had the games twice in 10 years.

Two United States delegates are expected—Avery Brundage from Chicago and Frederic R. Coudert of New York. Brundage has registered with the committee but Coudert has not yet reported. Brundage is expected to state the case for Detroit, and it is possible he may try to arrange to vote for London in 1944 provided Detroit gets the games in 1948.

British officials have wasted no opportunities to impress on delegates what a great place London would be for the '44 games.

Favorites Advance With Ease in Men's City Tennis Play

Lynch Beats Hutchinson In Two Sets

Johnsen Turns Back Sturtevant After Rally, 9–7, 6–8, 6–3; 12 Matches Today

By Jack Munhall.

In direct contrast to Saturday's hectic opening which saw the elimination of the third and seventh seeded players, the City of Washington Men's Tennis Tournament assumed a Sabbath-day tranquillity at Edgemoor Club yesterday as favorites advanced without casualty.

In singles and also in doubles, which started with one of the strongest fields ever entered in a local tournament, competition moved along at a smooth but often exciting pace. Bits of excitement were occasioned by unexpectedly stiff opposition offered seeded players by lesser regarded foes.

Top-seeded Hugh Lynch, for the second day in a row, played shaky tennis in the second set and staggered to a 6—0, 9—7 victory over John Hutchinson. Lynch's doubles partner and former junior champion, Davie Johnsen, also ran into more trouble than expected before defeating Charles Sturtevant, 9—7, 6—8, 6—3. Only a brisk rally during which he pulled out the first set saved Johnsen from possible upset.

Plenty of Ability

In contrast were the performances of a pair of newcomers, Dick Murphy, formerly the Nation's twelfth ranking player, and Alphonso Smith, high ranking Middle Atlantic player, as well as second-seeded Lieut. Jimmy Farrin and the unseeded Billy Turner, Buddy Adair and Austin Rice.

Murphy and Smith displayed plenty of ability in beating Ben Jaffe, 6—1, 6—1, and Tom Mangan, 6—4, 6—1, respectively, and many observers were of the opinion either or both have a good chance of reaching the semifinals.

Lieut. Farrin, youthful Naval officer, who lost to Lynch in last year's finals, continued his unspectacular but steady stroking with a 6—1, 6—3 triumph over veteran Deane Judd.

Meanwhile, the improving Adair walloped Ed Kane, 6—1, 6—1; Turner, promising junior star, rallied to turn back George Herbert, 6—2, 6—8, 6—3, and Austin Rice, continuing to play some of his finest tennis, defeated Frank Clark, 6—2, 6—0.

Draw Bye

Dooly Mitchell and Ralph McElvenny, defending champions and top-seeded doubles team, drew a bye, but two of the other seeded combinations saw action and turned in convincing victories. Second-Ranked Lieuts. Bill Howard and Jimmy Farrin, who were defeated in the 1938 final, won twice, defeating Bert Curran and John Curran, 6—0, 6—2, in the first round, and Frank Clark and Fontanini, 6—0, 6—1, in the second round.

The fourth seeded duo of Hugh Lynch and Davie Johnsen polished off veterans Pat Deck and Joel Baker in their opening effort.

Another impressive doubles team was unseeded Ed Mather and Alphonso Smith, who eliminated the only red-haired pair in the tournament, Wilson and Thompson, by the scores of 6—2, 6—1.

There are three singles and nine doubles matches scheduled for today. The features are the singles between Dick Murphy and the dangerous Ray Stocklinski at 3 o'clock, and Billy Contreras and Alphonso Smith at 4 o'clock. Contreras upset seventh-seeded Joel Baker in his first round match.

Yesterday's results and today's pairings:

Demand Lifts Steel Output To 52 Per Cent

But Adverse Factors May Be Obstacles To Continued Gain

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, June 4.—A more active steel demand was reported today by the magazine Steel, but it said the four-point production rise last week may be somewhat misleading. Operations increased to 52 per cent of capacity, the highest rate in eight weeks and 28½ per cent better than a year ago.

The publication listed several factors which it said will prevent consumption the next 30 days from matching the recent trend of steelmaking. They were:

(1) Automobile builders will require only small steel tonnages for a number of weeks; (2) some farm equipment plants have scheduled temporary shutdowns shortly; (3) railroad needs are likely to continue restricted for the near future; (4) requirements of some other consumers usually temper off at this time of the year.

Strong support in steelmaking, meanwhile, is expected from unfilled mill orders acquired several weeks ago.

A 19.5 reduction in pigiron production was reported for the month of May although operations still were 37.2 per cent larger than a year ago.

Listed as recent favorable developments in the heavy steel market was a Navy order for 9,500 tons to be used for 16 new destroyers and submarines. Structural shapes and concrete reinforcing bars also were more active and the railroad equipment market was enlivened by an inquiry for 1,110 freight cars.

The scrap composite was unchanged at $14, although scrap was stronger in a number of districts. The finished steel composite held at $58.70.

Rukeyser Says: U. S. Needs National Bookkeeping

By Merryle Stanley Rukeyser,
International News Service Economic Commentator

Congress does its hard work through its committees, and the various committees in hearings seek to offset bias by selecting witnesses of varying viewpoints.

But this at best is a hit-or-miss system. As the economic life of the Nation becomes more complicated, Congressmen need new intellectual tools. Instead of relying on the gossip and impressions of various celebrities and letters from constituents, Congressmen are entitled to organized fact finding, which will accurately photograph the significant realities about the way the people earn their living.

This function is not at present filled satisfactorily by the scattered statistical agencies of the Federal Government. Instead of piecemeal academic statistics, which distort the realities and yank individual situations out of their settings, Congressmen need the tool of summarized national bookkeeping—simple arithmetic in double entry form.

Once data concerning the significant totalities of American economic life are readily available, then many of the controversies of the day will readily resolve themselves. Then, instead of searching for enlightenment as to basic facts, the Congressional committees, in seeking the counsel of specialists, will be able to concentrate on expert interpretation of the facts.

It is dangerous to seek to manage a vast national economy without an uninterpreted flow of significant totality figures which photograph the realities. Mere estimates and conjectural statistical graphs are like tintypes which blur the impression.

If a democratic system of government is to keep apace of the growing complexities of our civilization, these simplifying economic tools are essential to popular understanding. Accounting summaries enable the human mind to penetrate new economic complexities.

Private corporations, with plants and operations scattered throughout the world, are supervised by chief executives, who are aided by rapid and summarized brookkeeping. Without such improved methods of accounting, it would be impossible to manage great enterprises wisely.

If the technique of private accounting is adapted to everybody's business, then the fog which surrounds public affairs will tend to be dissipated.

It is fashionable nowadays for little men in big jobs in the dictatorship countries to sneer at the democracies as muddleheaded. It is not enough to answer such attacks by pointing with pride to the achievements of the American system. In addition, it is desirable to provide free peoples with new intellectual tools for meeting changing economic problems.

At a time when economy by government is imperative, it would help Congress to save by setting up a centralized and independent agency for current national bookkeeping.

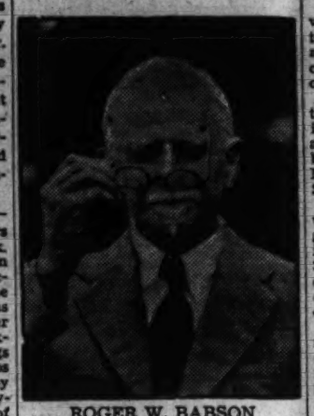
Nation Needs More Employers To Provide Jobs, Babson Says

Depression Hit Laborers First, Then White Collar Workers, He Says, but Now Executives Are in Distress

By Roger W. Babson

New York City, June 24.—The church which I attend at Wellesley Hills has what it called an "Open Door." The church is open every afternoon and evening, seven days a week and 52 weeks a year for those who have problems. Some lay man or some lay woman is in charge of the work each afternoon or evening.



ROGER W. BABSON

There are fifty of these business men and women of the community who are on duty during the year. In addition to being of help to those who call with their various problems, these conferences are of great value in enabling our leading citizens to learn first-hand of the spiritual, educational, economic, and civil troubles which the less fortunate have.

When the big depression started—in 1930-31—it was the day laborers who were first thrown out of work. The greatest hardship came upon them for they had no savings accounts nor other reserves. As the center of the depression was reached—in 1933 and 1934—another group, including white-collar workers, began to suffer as their savings were used up. Both of these groups have been aided for some time by the WPA and other forms of Government spending. The recession of 1938-39, however, has reached the higher-bracket incomes—the salesman, executive, and employer group.

Employers Hard Hit

Eight years ago the distress cases were among the poorly paid day laborers. Five years ago they were among the mechanics and clerks. Now they are among the executives and employers. Recently I was on duty at the "Open Door" session. I had five callers. Three of my 've callers were among the executive class who ten years ago were receiving salaries in excess of $5,000 a year and two were employers! This is not only a new development in the unemployment situation, but it is vitally important to every manufacturer and merchant.

These executives and their families have been the good spenders. If this group must now slash their standard of living, it means even less trade and fewer jobs. No WPA or Government relief program has yet been devised to help the investor, executive, or employer group. In short, an entirely new problem is developing today in connection with unemployment. The employer class is now suffering with all others. Since they are the ones who must provide the jobs, the time has come for action.

Private Ownership

If we are to continue our system of private ownership, there must be radical changes in the attitude of the Government, labor leaders, and even preachers toward employers. Unless the State is to take over all industry and be responsible for giving everybody a job, then it is essential that it help, rather than hinder, employers. When there is a shortage of work, the need is for more employers. This is the simple and only answer to unemployment!

We are, therefore, facing this Fascism) or else we must change our American system of Government and turn to State capitalism (which ultimately develops into Fascism) or else we muts change our attitude toward employers, builders and investors. We have played at this thing too long. Now that all groups are suffering, we can delay the choice no longer. When scores of well-paid executives are forced to sell their homes, slash their standard of living, and return to manual day labor, then we come smack up against a problem which has not yet occurred during the depression.

Must Encourage Employers

If the great need today is for more employers, we must encourage employers. The following are three ways this can be done:

(1) Taxes can and must be lowered. I refer to city taxes, State taxes, Federal taxes, and the other hundred and one taxes now inflicted upon employers. This, moreover, is not an appeal for the idle rich. As far as I am concerned, Roosevelt can put a 90 per cent tax on the "play-boys.' I am asking for lower taxes on homes, business blocks, and factories. No matter how much money the Federal Government is willing to loan for new houses, building will not increase until taxes are reduced. It is the taxes which you must pay on your home and on the addition to your plant that hold back building. Merely lowering the interest rate on mortgages will not encourage you to build a new house if your taxes are going to increase more than what you save on mortgage interest!

(2) Labor must let up on employers for awhile. I believe in collective bargaining. The wage workers of the corporation have as much right to combine and negotiate through some person of their own choosing as have the stockholders. When labor leaders, however, think that they must get a little more each year for their members in order to hold their jobs and collect their dues, it is very dangerous. Wage workers should realize that their leaders may serve them better at times by urging a reduction in wages or an increase in hours. The current theory about hours is wrong. Reducing hours ultimately increases prices so that the net result is a loss in the number of jobs. Only as more is produced is there more to divide.

(3) Restriction and regulation as to building operations and other new plans of employers should temporarily be lifted. Every kind of handicap today is placed upon a man who wishes to build a new factory or store or even to put an addition on his plant. I recently wished to have a new toilet put into my building and was obliged to consult four different government officials to make this simple improvement. Employers must now secure city permits, State permits, Federal permits, labor union permits, fire permits, smoking permits and various other kinds of permits before they can spend a dollar!

Not only this, but people in the neighborhood oppose the addition on the factory because it will create more noise or something else. The time has come when parents must choose between having noise, smoke and a job for their children, or no noise and no job. In the meantime, employers are saying to themselves, "What's the use?" Life is too short." As a result, the number of employers is getting smaller every day instead of getting bigger, as is needed in order to create new jobs.

Race Tracks Booming

But the above is not the worst. While the number of employers in the basic industries—food, clothing and shelter—is rapidly declining, yet those engaged in promoting gambling, liquor, race tracks, slot machines, night clubs and pulp magazines are constantly increasing. This is the most serious factor of all. The character of our young people is being undermined, while the men over 50 are being thrown into the scrap heap. I am still an optimist for the long pull, believing that the American people will some day come to their senses. This "some day" must come very soon, however, if the unemployment problem is to be remedied under our current form of government!

Apparel Taxes

Chicago, June 4.—Studying predictions that the Nation's spring apparel bill will reach $500,000,000, the National Consumers Tax Commission estimates that these sales of fur, shoes, millinery and other clothing for men, women and children will involve payment of $48,000,000 in hidden taxes passed on to consumers as part of the prices.

Va. Cancer Control Group Raises $7,269

Total Is Nearly Twice as Much as In 1938 Campaign

Charlottesville, Va., June 4.—The State-wide cancer control campaign held this spring under the joint executive committee of the Women's Field Army for the Control of Cancer and the Virginia Cancer Foundation, raised a total of $7,269.66 up to June 1, according to Dr. Edwin P. Lehman, University Virginia surgeon, who is chairman of the committee.

Approximately $6,000 of this total will be spent in Virginia in giving treatment to needy cancer patients and in carrying forward the educational campaign for better control of cancer, Dr. Lehman said.

The 1939 total of $7,269.66 is nearly twice as much as the $3,917.09 raised in 1938. This is the third year that a cancer control campaign has been carried forward as part of the Nation-wide effort of the American Society for the Control of Cancer.

Organizations for cancer control were formed this year in 66 of Virginia's 100 counties and in 18 of the incorporated cities. Mrs. Thomas J. Starke, of Richmond, was State commander of the Virginia Section of the Women's Field Army, which directed the campaign.

Dr. Lehman made his report at a meeting in Richmond of the joint committee, which was reorganized in preparation for continuing the fight against cancer through the remainder of 1939 and for staging an even more intensive cancer control campaign in 1940.

With Dr. Lehman as chairman the new joint executive committee includes Mrs. Fred M. Alexander, Richmond; Dr. R. P. Bell, Staunton; Dr. I. A. Bigger, Richmond; Miss Lucille Bland, West Point; Mrs. R. G. Boarwright, Coeburn; Dr. James R. Cash, Charlottesville; Dr. Wright Clarkson, Petersburg; Dr. I. C. Harrison, Danville; Mrs. William W. Hines, Petersburg; Dr. Fred M. Hodges, Richmond; Dr. J. Mrs. McLawhorn's Services Today

Funeral services for Mrs. Nancy McLawhorn, 82, wife of the late J. Z. McLawhorn, contractor of Ayden N. C., who died yesterday at Providence Hospital, will be held at 8 a. m. today at Deal's funeral home. Burial will be in Ayden Tuesday after services at the Christian Church there.

A member of an old Ayden family, Mrs. McLawhorn had been in this city visiting her daughter, Mrs. Sue A. Davis, of 4110 Twenty-second street northeast. Also surviving are two other daughters, Mrs. Cara Allen, of Ayden, and Mrs. Clyde Kelliher, of Washington.

Farm Income 9 Billion in '38, A Billion Drop

Includes 7½ Billion Cash From Markets, $482,000,000 From U.S.

By the Associated Press

The Bureau of Agricultural Economics estimated yesterday that American farmers had a gross income in 1938 of $9,220,000,000 from farm production and Government subsidies.

This compared with $10,350,000,000 estimated for 1937, $5,562,000,000 for 1932—the lowest for what the bureau called the "depression" period—and $12,791,000,000 for 1929.

The 1938 income included $7,538,000,000 cash for farm marketings, $482,000,000 from Government benefit payments, and $1,200,000,000 worth of products retained for farm consumption.

The bureau said the greater portion of the decline in gross income from 1937 to 1938 was due to a decrease in receipts from crops, particularly from grains, fruits, vegetables and cotton. The gross income from all crops declined 18 per cent, while that from livestock and livestock products dropped less than 9 per cent.

Government benefit payments, on the other hand, were 31 per cent larger in 1938.

In two States—Iowa and South Dakota—the gross income was about 5 per cent higher in 1938 than in 1937, due largely to expanded livestock feeding operations. Largest declines were reported for Kansas, California, Texas, Colorado, Maine and Florida.

The gross income from major commodities for 1937 and 1938, respectively, included:

Corn, $248,914,000 and $291,315,000; wheat, $617,547,000 and $443,554,000; oats, $66,126,000 and $41,608,000; cotton lint, $770,377,000 and $575,741,000; cotton seed, $113,399,000 and $91,494,000; tobacco, $318,305,000 and $294,063,000; potatoes, $235,259,000 and $173,310,000; truck crops, $360,204,000 and $318,176,000; citrus fruits, $138,755,000 and $81,349,000; apples, $143,170,000 and $102,756,000; farm gardens, $199,451,000 and $185,489,000; cattle, $1,237,422,000 and $1,165,079,000; hogs, $1,161,157,000 and $1,072,800,000; sheep, $194,956,000 and $163,055,000; chickens, $380,407,000 and $357,958,000 milk, $1,960,922,000 and $1,778,813,000; wool, 117,270,000 and $71,378,000, and eggs, $651,496,000 and $608,015,000.

The Commerce Department reported yesterday that 9 per cent of the domestic production of movable goods was exported in 1938, the largest proportion since 1930.

Among principal factors influencing foreign trade last year, the report said, were an exportable surplus of farm products, good business conditions in some foreign countries and armament programs.

"While it is not possible to isolate and to measure the influence of reciprocal trade agreements on the trade apart from that of other economic factors, the trade agreements operated throughout the year as a force tending to foster the foreign trade of the United States," the study added.

Exports from the United States in 1938 were valued at $3,094,000,000 compared with $3,349,000,000 in 1937. General imports were valued at $1,961,000,000 in 1938 and at $3,084,000,000 in 1937.

3,500 Hear Dr. Johnson at Baccalaureate

Tells Howard Seniors They Must Help Make Democracy Work

"The survival of democracy in America is linked with this Nation's solution of its No. 1 economic problem," Dr. Mordecai W. Johnson, president of Howard University, said yesterday in his baccalaureate address to the university's graduates. More than 3,500 heard the address and saw the exercises.

Such solution, he pointed out, depends on application of the university type of mind to problems of the day. "There is no problem in America," he said, "greater than the present reconstruction of the South. The greatest need of the Negro, and the poorer type of white, is a new system of work.

"Democracy is competing with enthusiastic governments, with new ideals of life, to which they are giving themselves with all their hearts. Beside them, democracy cannot survive, unless it believes in its own principles, which will, if properly used, uproot the economic slave system now in vogue. We must admit, however, that we are not even trying to put democracy into effect in Georgia, Alabama or Mississippi.

"Booker T. Washington led the South back to the idea of work as an essential of human life, but the best that he could do was to get established a system of industrial schools pitched below the university level, without dealing with the great spiritual problems of the philosophy of work.

"The time has come, not to destroy the philosophy of Washington, but to erect his philosophy as the first item of the university curriculum, to give the mind of university caliber a field in the world of work. There is no adequate solution of the problem of work that does not begin with questioning of the work system. The university man and woman must function in this area.

"The man who characterizes as a Communist one who thinks along these lines is, himself, the most dangerous man in American democracy, who would throttle all free working intelligence, and drive all honest thinkers, of university caliber, under the ground."

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

A case of misbidding is submitted by S. R. S., who bid so many different suits in his effort to reach a slam that his partner, not surprisingly confused, let the matter drop as soon as he could find a convenient resting place, which, unfortunately for the pair, was below a slam.

Here are the cards and the somewhat baffling bidding:

WEST
♠ A K J 9 7 6 4
◇ A 7
♣ A K J

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 ♡	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	4 ♣	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	5 ◇	Pass
5 ♡	Pass	5 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

"It is my contention," says S. R. S., "that East should have kept the bidding open by a declaration preferably of either six hearts or six spades, even thought it was later determined that East did not have a very sound opening bid."

While it may be that East should have kept the bidding open to a slam at either hearts or spades, for which West was obviously trying, West, in our opinion, did not handle the bidding well.

He bid too many suits. It would have been wise for him to have continued rebidding his spades, showing his distribution as well as his top tricks. This procedure might have encouraged his partner to keep going to a slam althought there is no reason why West could not have bid it himself.

On the next hand the players failed to reach even game, though a small slam was highly probable with their cards.

WEST	EAST
♠ K 2	♠ Q 7 3
♡ K J 10 5 4	♡ A Q
◇ 8 6 3 2	◇ A Q J 10 9 5 4
♣ 9 3	♣ A

The bidding.

East	South	West	North
1 ◇	2 ♣	2 ♡	Pass
3 ◇	Pass	Pass	Pass

M. A. S., the contributor of the hand and East player, states his case as follows:

"My contention is that partner had another bid and should not pass. I rebid diamonds to show a long suit, reserving the right to bid or assist in hearts later.

While M. A. S. may be justified in complaining that his partner should have made another bid, he is equally guilty of timidity to the hand.

Since his partner made a free bid in calling two hearts, it would have been wiser for East to jump in diamonds, going to four, to show the exceptional strength of his hand, rather than being content with a minimum bid of three.

An assist in hearts with a doubleton would not be advisable when East holds such a strong seven-card suit.

The Federal Diary

By The Diarist

ONE sweetly solemn thought: What will become of that perfectly swell little Press Section in the Bureau of Biological Survey after that agency is transferred into the v-a-s-t Interior Department? There was one of the hardest-hitting, ablest little groups in town that did a tireless, propaganda-free service for America's wildlife resources. It should be remembered.

WE note with awe the activity of Secretary of Interior Ickes, who, within the last four days, according to his tireless press division:

Submitted the name "Havasu" for the lake formed by Parker Dam, on the Colorado River, and had it o. k.'d by his Board of Geographic Names.

Was told by Land Commissioner Johnson that 14 per cent of the public domain remained to be surveyed.

Received a report from National Park Service Chief Cammerer on Rocky Mountain National Park.

Temporarily withhld a fee for "Chip" Robert in connection with a PWA project.

Was presented with a press release on Carlsbad Caverns, which, in its entire three pages, did not contain one mention of his name.

THE personnel of committees in charge of arrangements for Federal Employes Day, under sponsorship of the National Legislative Council of Federal Employe Organizations at the New York World's Fair, are announced as:

National Federation of Federal Employes: Luther C. Steward, Gertrude M. McNally, John Fitzgerald, Lee R. Whitney, Charles L. Wiegand, Walter P. Taylor, Ulrey J. Biller, William M. Rapsher, George L. Evans, Arthur Joachims and Vaux Owen. United National Association of Postoffice Clerks: John J. Barrett, Thomas J. Bussier, Fred D. Sullivan, O. D. Aston, Floyd R. Sanders, Clarence Rotherum and John J. Kraus. National Association of Postal Supervisors: M. F. Fitzpatrick, J. J. Lane, C. L. Watson, J. J. Field, Charles C. Lohman, H. C. Ressler, John A. McMahon, Enoch Nelson, Robert E. Connolly and Edward J. Rorke. National Rural Letter Carriers Association: Raymond H. Combs, L. M. Walker, Max B. Lightner, W. L. Fletcher, Alvin Houston, Wiley M. Riedel and Thomas G. Walters. The day will be observed June 24.

Bob Burns Says—

I've been tryin' to invent somethin' for ten years that'll be a boon to the womenwolks. It's gonna be a penny weighin' machine that will make everybody weigh just exactly what they want'ta weigh. Of course, some folks—like my fat Aunt Pudgey—will have to put in two pennies.

Every woman I ever knew had the secret of makin' black sound like white when it come to her appearance. They've always got a pat excuse for why they ain't Venus D. Milos. When Aunt Dodie went to the doctor for a physical examination one time, he said, "I find that you're 5 feet 2 inches tall and weigh 150 pounds. You're very much over-weight."

She said, "Why, that's ridiculous! I ain't over-weight. I'm just a few inches too short."

Veteran Demands Name on Memorial In Frederick

Frederick, Md., June 4.—Frederick County's "unknown soldier," is demanding recognition.

Malster McKinley Carter, 41-year-old Baltimore & Ohio Railroad brakeman of Lime Kiln, Md., just discovered the other day that of the 2,100 men from Frederick County who served in the World War, his is the only name not inscribed on the county's memorial in Baker Park.

He served more than a year with the A. E. F., and is demanding that the Frederick County Memorial Society, which erected the monument a decade ago, remove one of the large bronze plates and inscribe his name. Ruger B. Rice, a member of the memorial committee, said Carter's name was omitted through an oversight.

3 Boys Escape From Cheltenham

Washington police and Maryland authorities are searching for three colored youths who escaped from Cheltenham Reformatory yesterday morning. The prisoners were missed shortly after a recreation period on the parade grounds at 11 a. m.

The hunted youths are Harold Hurpp, 20; Arthur Willis, 19; and Dorsey Bryant, 18. They are all dressed in blue denim shirts and pants.

Cumberland D. A. R. Rites

Cumberland, Md., June 4.—Cresap Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, held memorial services this afternoon in Rose Hill Cemetery. The Rev. David Cartwright Clark, rector of Emmanuel Episcopal Church, conducted the services, assisted by Mrs. G. Wilbur Seymour, regent, and Mrs. William A. Gulland, chaplain. Bronze markers were placed on the graves of Miss Mary Lynn Robbins, Mrs. Mary H. Phillips and Mrs. Georgie Daisy, members.

Secrets in Love

By Phyllis Moore Gallagher

Chapter XXIX

Peg battled her way through the cafeteria that noon. In the office later she put in a telephone call for Paul. Around 4 o'clock he returned to the embassy and gave her a ring. Just as she picked up the receiver, a noise like a thousand gigantic bees came through the open window. One of the clerks said, "there's the New York plane. Boy, isn't it a beaut!" Peg, turning a little in her chair, saw the long silver plane swooping down over the Potomac. She looked away quickly and picked up the telephone on her desk.

Paul said, "H'la, darling! What's up?"

Peg said: "I think I'll go down the river on that yachting jaunt with you and your friends, Paul. That is, if the invitation is still open."

Paul said, swiftly: "Sure, darling! Be ready?"

Peg's Decision

Then, she said, unsteadily: "Paul, I made you a half-way promise the other night. If you're still interested, I'll make it a whole promise."

She heard him catch his breath. "Peg!" And then excitedly, "darling, I'll be in front of your office door in exactly ten minutes." He paused one moment. Then he said: "Peg, say that once more. I've got to be sure I heard it right."

Peg repeated what she said. Paul said, "Yes, I thought those were the words I heard!" Then he hung up and Peg just sat there, staring out of the window. The long silver plane was out of sight now. It had dipped down behind the trees. But Peg could still see it very plainly in her thoughts. Anthony helping a small blond girl down the little flight of steps that were wheeled across the landing field. Anthony being tender and gentle because Evangeline was very precious to him. In the next moment Peg bent over her typing with a furious concentration.

THALIA POLK ate dinner on that soft Spring night in a bitter and brooding silence, though she was not alone. At the head of the long sparkling table, peering at her over low bowls of gardenias and tall candelabra, twisted and intertwisted like the branches of a silver tree, sat the Senator.

Mrs. Polk was not there. Thalia and her mother had quarreled endlessly all Spring; indeed, straight up until this morning when Mrs. Polk had departed for Newport.

Mrs. Polk had been furious because Thalia had allowed an "insipid little English hussy with as much physical appeal as a poorly dressed Maypole" to annex Washington's most eligible bachelor.

"That could just as easily have been your engagement that was announced to Tony Covington," Mrs. Polk had said resentfully when she had read the announcement weeks ago. "But did you turn a hair to get him over to this house? Did you do one single thing to make him conscious of you when I managed to have him here? No, you did not! You spent all your time thinking about Hewitt Gill. And you made a fool of yourself down in Florida when he was there. Every one was laughing at you quite openly because you had not the slightest subtlety in throwing yourself at him."

Mrs. Polk had said another time: "What earthly good did it all do you, Thalia? If memory serves me correctly, Hewitt Gill hasn't been to this house since we returned from Florida. He hasn't sent you so much as a wilted dandelion! Every one says he's simply 'fried' all the time now and starts fights in night clubs! Still you sit home, drooping, camping by the telephone. Passing up very splendid engagements simply because you think—you hope—that wretched person will call you. Well, he hasn't yet, and I don't imagine he will, and if you have any sense at all you'll have a few cocktail parties and ask some attractive bachelors. Count Stranyan, for instance. I don't believe for one moment he's interested in that Patterson girl. She's one of those stiff-backed utterly boring conservatives and not the type at all who'd attract a spohisticated man like Stranyan. At least, not seriously."

Thalia sometimes said: "I'm sorry, Mother." or "Please, Mother, you're making yourself ill with these tirades." But most of the time she just stood and listened with her eyes dark and sullen and her mouth a grim red line. Indeed, Thalia had stood the bickering much better than the Senator.

Father Promises Help

The Senator had cudgeled his brains for a solution and had found one. He had wired to a real estate firm in Newport, had negotiated for a massive pile of bricks there and had finally announced to his wife that she was to have a season at Newport. The idea had been an inspiration.

Mrs. Polk's eyes had hardened for battle. She was socially secure in Washington and Florida, but Newport was something else again. She had departed this morning with firm instructions to Thalia: "I'm leaving you here to look after your father until adjournment, and I hope by the time you join me in Newport you'll be quite yourself again."

Then she was gone and Thalia thanked the Senator with her eyes.

"I'm going to be rotten company, Dad," she had told him. "I'll hate myself for it because you're a swell guy and you don't deserve a daughter like me. But somehow I can't seem to snap out of it."

The Senator had said simply: "I know, kid. Well, battle it out on your own line, whatever it is. And remember, if there's any part for the old man, he's here to play it."

And now Thalia and her father were having dinner in silence. She glanced up at him every now and then and smiled in gratitude because he did not try to force her into conversation.

Then she slipped back into the dark, turgid pool of her thoughts. Not very pleasant thoughts. She had made a fool of herself over Hewitt and she knew it. She had been cheap, but only because she had been desperate and had feared all along that she was playing a futile game. For a little while down in Florida things had gone as she had planned them. Lovely golden days: days of a luminous indigo. A part of each one of them had been spent on the beach, lying on an air-filled mattress with Hewitt sitting so close, a maroon beach robe draped over his shoulders, his skin glowing with a deeply burnt tan that had made him terribly handsome.

Nights of Magic

There had been nights of magic, too; swaying palms and a sky like sequin-sprinkled blue velvet and Hewitt holding her in his arms as they glided to a rumba orchestra. There was always something about a rumba that went straight to her blood, arousing the primitive flame in it. The rhythm was as heady as wine, corrupt and completely sensual.

They had gone from that cabaret patio one night with the rhythm and a consciousness of their closeness still in their blood. Far up the beach Hewitt had made a place for her on the sand beside him. They had sat there in the aura of hibiscus and tropical perfumes with the shimmering silver of the sea stirring in the distance. She had thought, desperately: "I'd do anything to make him want me—anything. . ."

But all that pale dew-washed dawning, as she had walked alone down the beach with her cheeks burning in shame, she had recognized what she had done for what it really was. And always, she felt, Hewitt's words would beat against her mind in an agony of humiliation: "No can do, sweet . . . I'm not that much of a heel . . ." He had said that when her arms had been avid tendrils around his shoulders, when her lips had been pressed close against his cheek in demanding submission. Even though she loved Hewitt, as she had never thought it possible to love any man, it did not excuse her. She had been cheap—and Hewitt had flung that cheapness back in her face, untouched.

In Washington she had camped by the telephone, scarcely going out of the house for fear she might miss Hewitt's call. Still, he did not call and all sorts of tales came to her through her friends who dropped in for tea.

She shut her mind sharply on that thought. Her eyes, suddenly dim with tears, went to the chocolate frappe she had been eating without realizing it.

A Caller

A long while later, Thalia and her father got up from the table. She slipped her arm through his. She said, "Sometime, Dad, I'll give you the lowdown. Sometime when I can talk about it—and not go to pieces."

They were passing at that moment through the enormous hall toward the drawing room where a silver service of coffee waited them on the low Sheraton table. They had just settled themselves on the soft when the doorbell rang and the butler announced that Mr. Gill was calling on Miss Polk.

Thalia said swiftly: "Show Mr. Gill into the library, please, Dabney." Then she turned to her father, "Dad, I'd like to see Hewitt alone—for a minute, May we join you later for coffee?"

The Senator smiled. In that moment his daughter, his beloved young daughter who was the very meaning of his life, seemed washed in a sudden brilliant radiance.

At the library door, Thalia paused. Hewitt was standing by the long French window; a much thinner Hewitt—a much older one. He was sober. And his hand, holding a cigarette, had not the slightest tremble. Hewitt smiled a little when she came down the three steps. He said: "Thalia, this was nervy of me, I suppose, but I dropped in tonight thinking perhaps maybe you'd take pity on a guy who's been a crazy dope for months. I thought maybe you'd let me take you dancing somewhere."

Then he took her hands in his palms. Her fingers were trembling. Thalia knew; but she didn't care. "If you're willing," Hewitt was saying, gently, "I think we could have a lot of fun together from now on." What he said in itself wasn't really important; but Thalia meeting his dark eyes read an unspoken message in them. Perhaps he wasn't quite over whatever had happened between him and Peg Patterson; perhaps he never would be really. But he was very much the same Hewitt she had fallen in love with last Autumn. And time—oh, time was the weaver of miracles. All she needed was Hewitt looking at her like this—and time . . .

To Be Concluded Tomorrow.

Georgetown U. Seniors Hear Fr. Stephens

500 at Baccalaureate Told to Preserve Democratic Ideal

Nearly 500 graduating Georgetown University seniors were urged yesterday to "fight incessantly for the preservation of every right that is inherent to man" by the Rev. Edward L. Stephens in a baccalaureate sermon at mass on the college lawn.

Declaring that the world has lost sight of man's dignity through departing from Christian teaching, he said, "unless the philosophy known as the American democratic ideal is vitalized with the spirit of Christ's justice and love, it becomes a gateway for those isms that have transformed Europe from symphony to discord."

Race discrimination has no place in American democracy or Christian practice, Father Stephens said. "Such a doctrine, such a practice, such a system of persecution is fundamentally unsound from the standpoint of the American background and the teachings of Jesus Christ."

Many Alumni Remain

Many of the alumni that had returned to Georgetown for the sesquicentennial celebrations last week remained for the class day exercises yesterday and the commencement at 4 p. m. today, when Charles H. English will make the address.

After a band concert and lawn party yesterday afternoon, the evening was devoted to the traditional Tropaia ceremony, when honors, prizes and medals were bestowed on 79 seniors for outstanding work, and the Cohonguorton Oration was delivered by William J. Driscoll, jr., of Lawrence, Mass.

In rhythmic phrases recalling the measures of Longfellow's Indian classics, Driscoll bade farewell for his class to the Potomac River, first called Cohonguroton, "River of Swans," by the Piscataway Indians, before the Jesuit Fathers founded their college on the Hilltop.
